

U.S., states to crack down on runaway parents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The hunt is officially on by the state and federal governments for fathers and mothers who don't support their children.

Federal specialists say they hope the program will save taxpayers an estimated $1 billion of the $5.6 billion paid in aid last year to families of dependent children.

Until last year, most states had no machinery to track down runaway parents. However, a new federal welfare law now makes it necessary for all states to establish an effective program to trace deserters. About $300,000 in federal funds was infused into the program last week when Congress overrode a presidential veto.

In the last 12 months, 44 state programs have been approved by the child support division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Louis B. Hays, deputy administrator of the program, says, "It is a rare opportunity for the average state to undertake activity that benefits states as well as families and children."

Hays added that a study done for HEW shows that 50 per cent of the parents who desert their children have the ability to support them. Federal administrators say that almost 99 per cent of the deserters are fathers.

The law also provides that tracing and collecting facilities be made available to nonwelfare families. Hays said that since last summer his office has received about 14,000 letters asking for help from non-welfare families.

The purpose of making the program available to everyone is to help borderline cases where a family might be forced to go on welfare if the father didn't come through with support payments.

Once the parent is located, the law provides for a number of ways to enforce payment. One is the garnishment of wages. This also is the first time that wages of federal employees will be subject to garnishment for the purpose of child support and alimony obligations.

In one instance, an Army colonel in California has had his paycheck garnished for the $30,000 he owed his family in back support payments, Hays said.

Fathers or mothers who wish to have their spouse located are now able to contact their state or local child support agency. The state agency will first attempt to locate the parent.

If unsuccessful, the agency can contact the federal parentlocator service, which will try to obtain the last home address or last place of employment from federal agencies like Social Security.

The program ran into some trouble last summer when President Ford objected to parts of the law that he said "go too far by injecting the federal government into domestic relations."

Last week, the Senate overrode Ford's veto of a money bill that included $300,000 that Hays says will go towards running the parentlocator service.

For some states, the program is not a new one. For 20 years, California has had a program operated by the district attorney's office. California officials report savings of more than $100 million in the last three years from tracking down absentee fathers and forcing them to support their children rather than welfare.

TIME TO RUN

Plane was to pick up 90 at OIA, fly to Vegas

Some 90 passengers waiting at Ontario International Airport Sunday for a "gambler's special" plane to Las Vegas were told that their flight had been canceled due to poor weather conditions.

They did not know then that the chartered Mercer Airlines D-6 plane had crashed on takeoff from Hollywood-Burbank Airport, killing three crew members and injuring 13 persons, mostly firemen.

"The passengers were not told about the crash," said an airport spokesman. "The word went out over the public address system that the flight was canceled because of the weather."

"You just don't walk up to people and tell them about a tragedy. We didn't want anyone falling over in the lobby."

The passengers were waiting for a chartered flight to take them to a casino where they would gamble about 12 hours, and then return, he said.

Firemen scamper from the flames of an airplane crash Sunday near Van Nuys Airport.

Three persons died in the crash, and 10 firemen were burned.

Three die in airplane crash; flareup burns firemen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two stewardesses and a part-time charter airline employee crouched in the rear of the wreckage of a four-engine plane which had crashed and killed the pilot and two other crewmen.

As rescuers worked their way toward them, the wreckage suddenly burst into flames again. Several firemen suffered serious burns when their clothing caught fire in the blaze.

The three survivors were eventually rescued with no serious injuries, "okay, but pretty well shook up."

The charter DC6, owned by Mercer Aviation, apparently lost an engine shortly after takeoff Sunday and went down on the edge of a rain-soaked golf course.

The dead crewmen and the three in the rear of the plane were the only persons aboard.

Stewardesses Jan Butte, 24, and Susan Masters, 25, and Guy DeMeo, 16, the part-time worker, were seated in the rear of the propeller-driven plane at the time of the crash.

Witnesses said firemen were trying to enter the front part of the wreckage when the flames erupted, sending them scrambling for safety.

Climbers die in 4,000-foot fall

KELSO, Wash. (AP) — Three mountain climbers from Seattle fell two-thirds of a mile to their deaths as they approached the peak of Mt. St. Helens.

Several other climbers saw the fall Saturday, including two who found the victims and stayed overnight beside the bodies.

The dead climbers were identified Sunday as Vernon E. Stiles, 54, and Jack D. Amos and his wife, Judy, both believed to be in their late 20s. Skamania County sheriff's officers said.

"During the rescue operation, the plane reignited and burned several firemen seriously," said George Douglas of the Los Angeles City Fire Department.

The injured firemen were taken to Los Angeles County-USC Medical Center and the Sherman Oaks Community Hospital.

The dead were listed as James R. Secumbe, 38, of Glendale, the pilot; Jack Finger, 55, of Carpentaria, copilot; and Arthur Bankers of Torrance, the flight engineer.

Investigators for the Federal Aviation Administration said one of the plane's engines disintegrated on takeoff from Hollywood-Burbank Airport, scattering debris along the runway.

The plane crashed as it tried an emergency landing at Van Nuys Airport, 10 miles away. The plane passed over heavily populated areas before plowing into a field near the Woodley Golf Course, which was closed because of rain.

Catastrophic illness plan is also proposed

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford formally asked Congress today for a multibillion dollar boost in Social Security taxes, new catastrophic illness insurance for older Americans and larger contributions by Medicare patients to finance hospital and doctor bills.

Ford has said the proposed tax increase would cost each employee who pays Social Security taxes less than $1 a week. The maximum increase for a worker would be $49, raising the total maximum tax for that worker to $1,014 in 1977. The tax hike would raise approximately $4.4 billion during the 1977 calendar year.

In his message to Congress, the President recommended that Medicare patients pay up to $500 per year for hospital care and skilled nursing services and $250 per year for doctor bills. He also called for a limit on Medicare payment rates in 1977 and 1978 for both hospital and physician services.

All the proposals outlined in Ford's special message were announced Jan. 1 in the President's State of the Union address. But Ford took the occasion of signing the message during an Oval Office ceremony to declare that older Americans "have earned the right to live securely, comfortably and independently."

The ceremony came exactly one month in advance of the Florida presidential primary, in which Ford will be vying for the votes of thousands of retired people in that state.

Here are key elements in the President's request for new legislation:

—To bolster the Social Security trust fund, now paying out more than it takes in, the President asked that payroll taxes paid by employees and employers be increased by three-tenths of 1 per cent each. This increase will cost no worker more than $1 a week, and most will pay less, Ford wrote.

—To protect Medicare beneficiaries against catastrophic medical bills, the President asked Congress to provide full coverage "for unlimited days of hospital and skilled nursing facility care," a more generous system than is now offered but one that would help only the minority of older people who need it.

—To increase incentives to keep Medicare costs down, Ford recommended that patients pay a larger share of hospital and doctor bills — up to $500 per year per patient for hospitals and skilled nursing services and $250 per year for doctor bills. This would affect all Medicare patients.

—In another move to "slow down the inflation of health costs" and help finance catastrophic protection, Ford asked that increases in Medicare payment rates in 1977 and 1978 be limited to 7 per cent a day for hospitals and 4 per cent for physicians' services.

Under the Ford plan, patients would pay 10 per cent of hospital and nursing home charges after the first day, up to a maximum of $500 a year.

"The savings from placing a limit on increases in Medicare payments and some of the revenue from increased cost-sharing will be used to finance the catastrophic illness program," Ford wrote in his message.

Key Angola city falls to MPLA

By The Associated Press

The Western-backed National Union — UNITA — said today that Huambo, its capital in south-central Angola, has fallen to the Soviet-backed Popular Movement (MPLA).

A drive on UNITA's military headquarters, Silva Porto, 30 miles away, is expected shortly, Western observers said.

The MPLA announced the capture of Huambo earlier in the day and said its victory in northern Angola was nearly complete.

The UNITA announcement was made to a news conference in Lusaka, Zambia by the movement's foreign minister, Jorge Sangumba.

State Department officials in Washington, commenting on the latest development in Angola, said the Western-backed forces there "just don't have the weapons to match Soviet rockets and tanks."

Slides, accidents, minor floods and power outages plagued the valley over the weekend as the heaviest storm in two years dumped four inches of rain on the area.

The storm is expected to subside by tonight, with showers predicted Tuesday. The weatherman predicts a respite from the rain Wednesday and Thursday, but a new storm is on the way and will arrive here Friday.

The rain caused several snow avalanches in the Mt. Baldy skiing areas Saturday and Sunday but no one was hurt. The storm also loosened rocks along Mt. Baldy Road causing several slides near the tunnel.

According to the Highway Patrol, the latest slide, which occurred early this morning, disrupted traffic on Mt. Baldy Road. Work crews arrived by 8 a.m. but the road remained closed this morning.

Four persons were injured in three rain related accidents throughout the valley. None of the injured was reported in serious condition.

Although General Telephone reported no serious interruption of service, there was a half hour power outage in the Claremont area Sunday night, and again early this morning. Four thousand customers were affected.

Good skiing conditions at Mt. Baldy were marred by warm temperatures which melted most of the snow even in the highest elevations. The Snow Crest Ski Lodge reported about 1½ feet of snow on the ground this morning.

Two teenagers were hurt slightly when their car skidded on a curve in a light rain early Sunday morning and struck a rock wall on Carbon Canyon Road west of Rosemary Street, Chino area.

The driver, Ronald D. Petrie, 17, of Fullerton, and his passenger, Gregory E. Potter, 16, of Placentia, were treated for minor injuries at Chino General Hospital and released.

In Pomona a motorist suffered a broken leg Sunday afternoon when his car slid off a gradual curve on rain-slick Pomona Boulevard west of Roselawn Avenue.

The driver, Charles G. Flannery, 58, Pomona, was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was admitted for treatment. His condition today was termed good.

Police reported Flannery was east-bound in Pomona Boulevard when his car slid off the road, over the curb, and into a utility pole. Firemen using power equipment had to be summoned to the scene to free him when he was trapped inside his car.

In Ontario a 21-year-old man apparently lost control of his car on a road at the rear of Tru-Mold Ind. Co. on State Street and crashed into the rear end of a train tram.

Peter Hans Magnolia of 9200 Monte Vista Ave., Montclair, suffered chest and head injuries in the accident early Sunday morning. He was taken to Doctors Hospital in Montclair where he was treated and kept overnight for observation.

Police said it was raining at the time of the accident and Magnolia, traveling at a high rate of speed, apparently lost control of his vehicle on the highway and slid into the rear of the tram.

In another rain related accident a police car driven by Ontario Police Officer Joe Sullivan skidded on wet pavement at Campus Avenue and Sixth Street in Ontario and crashed into a car early Sunday morning.

Sullivan and the driver of the second car were not injured in the mishap, but the police car had to be towed from the scene.

A California Highway Patrol is investigating the accident.

Legislature looks at malpractice, coastal protection

SACRAMENTO (AP) — More sparring over medical malpractice and the legislative debut of the coastal protection plan highlight a relatively quiet week for the California Legislature.

The effect on lawmakers, if any, of the ending of the Southern California doctors' slowdown last week may be reflected in their treatment of a doctor-backed malpractice bill.

The measure by Sen. Alfred Song, D-Monterey Park, was scheduled for hearing in the Senate Finance Committee today. A rival, Brown administration-backed bill by Assemblyman Howard Berman, D-Beverly Hills, is awaiting its first committee hearing.

Song has amended his bill to increase doctors' future insurance premiums to cover a portion of the expected future deficit in a state malpractice claim fund.

But his bill still demands far less of the doctors than Berman's, which would require them to support the entire fund with premiums that begin at an average of $4,000 but could average more than $40,000 within 10 years.

Berman's bill also would make doctors pay as much as one-fourth the amount of their annual premium out of their own pocket for each malpractice judgment against them. Another provision would require doctors to design a program offering some free or low-cost medical care to the needy.

Last week an aide to Song said he thought the two bills would be amended to bring them closer together, and eventually might be combined.

But Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy, the state's most powerful legislator, has vowed to fight any malpractice bill which would require taxpayers to bail out the state claims fund.

McCarthy says Song's bill would create a deficit of $2.5 billion within 10 years.

The coastal protection bill is to be introduced Tuesday by Sen. Anthony Beilenson, D-Los Angeles.

It would implement recommendations of the voter-created Coastal Commission, including a controversial proposal to make that commission permanent and give it veto power over coastal development.

The plan would curb coastal development that leap-frogged over open land, polluted the air, or blocked an ocean view needlessly. It also would require most developers who wanted to dredge or fill a marsh or estuary to first restore a wetland area of comparable value.

A companion bill by Assemblyman Gary Hart, D-Santa Barbara, would put a bond issue on the November ballot for state purchase and preservation of more than $200 million worth of coastal property.

Land development and labor groups are already fighting the proposed plan, and are trying to put a measure on the November ballot that would wipe out the Coastal Commission.

cisco, last month. Miss Hearst, who does not smile in public anymore, may be called to testify with the jury absent this week, regarding her famed taped message.

Patty may testify this week about tape in closed session

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's prosecutors say they will ask her judge to accept as evidence a tape in which the newspaper heiress boasts of participating willingly in a bank robbery with her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnappers.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter scheduled a special hearing today — outside the presence of the jury — to decide whether it will hear the tape. The tape was sent from the underground nine days after the April 15, 1974, San Francisco holdup for which Miss Hearst is on trial.

Carter said he would allow both the prosecution and the defense to present whatever testimony they want at the hearing, including witnesses.

Four crash victims rescued in Big Bear

LOS ANGELES (AP)— Search teams on snowshoes rescued four Sacramento-area residents who spent a day fighting snow and freezing rain after the crash of their light plane in the Big Bear Lake area.

But the Civil Air Patrol reported Sunday that a plane carrying four volunteer medical workers from Santa Barbara to San Carlos, Sonora, Mexico was still missing in rural San Diego County, and search efforts were hampered by continuing rain.

Those rescued near Big Bear were identified as Walter Laun, 49, the plane's pilot; his wife, Shirley, and passengers John McDonald, 50, and his wife, Mildred. They survived the 10 degree weather Saturday night by huddling together in the wreckage of their Cessna 182, authorities said.

The four were en route to Sacramento from Glendale, Ariz. Saturday when the plane crashed into the mountains about 10 miles from Big Bear Lake. Rescuers were led to the wreckage by signals transmitted by the crash victims. The four were taken to March Air Force Base in nearby Riverside, authorities said.

However, rescuers in rural San Diego County were frustrated in their efforts to locate four volunteer medical workers whose Belanca 230 was reported missing en route to Mexico last Friday.

'Zebra' murder trial expected to go to jury this week

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The "Zebra" murder trial — aftermath of a frightening series of attacks that shocked the nation two years ago — finally is expected to go to the jury this week.

Now in its 12th month, the trial of four young black men on murder and conspiracy charges has been one of the longest criminal trials in California history — and because of its length, could yet end in a mistrial.

One juror, a newlywed when the trial started March 3, 1975, is about to give birth. If she has to be excused, only one of four original alternates remains to fill in, with no further standbys available should another juror become incapacitated.

After more than 200 days in court and testimony from 181 witnesses, Superior Court Judge Joseph Karesh hopes to hear the last defense summation this week and sequester the jury to deliberate a verdict.

"The defendants are holding up remarkably well," said defense attorney Edward W. Jacko, a New York attorney retained for Green by the Nation of Islam. "They're in good spirits and confident in the belief they will be acquitted."

J.C. Simon, 29, Larry C. Green, 23, Manuel Moore, 31, and Jessie Lee Cooks, 30 — all Black Muslims — are accused of some of a series of 13 random street killings and seven assaults on whites between Nov. 25, 1973 and April 16, 1974.

Victims usually were shot at night

— as they waited for a bus, or carried laundry home, or took an evening stroll.

During a massive manhunt for the killers, 600 black men were stopped and questioned by police in an unusual tactic endorsed by former Mayor Joseph L. Alioto,

Considering overhaul of U.S. welfare laws

DURHAM, N.H. (AP) — President Ford, saying he thinks New Hampshire Republicans will prefer his performance to Ronald Reagan's rhetoric, is considering a post-election overhaul of welfare laws to help the needy and "cut out ... the chiselers."

Ford was back at the White House today after a two-day hunt for votes in the nation's first presidential primary. He said he might be back before the Feb. 24 balloting.

"I expect to do well in New Hampshire," Ford said, dismissing suggestions that his campaign organization is faltering where Reagan's is strong.

He said he thinks the voters will base their judgment on policies — "I don't think they will make their decision on the basis of promises or rhetoric."

Ford sketched his welfare ideas in the most general of terms at a wind-up appearance Sunday night before some 3,500 people, most of them students and some of them hecklers, at the University of New Hampshire.

He took the heckling with a fixed smile and an admonition that people should listen to each other whether they agree or disagree. He answered questions for an hour, most of it spent recounting administration positions and proposals.

The vast majority of the student audience was on his side. Indeed, by the time a youth in a gorilla costume got to the microphone to ask the last question, most of the jeers and shouts had ended.

"My name is Bonzo and I'm an escapee from an old Ronald Reagan flick," the costumed youth told the President. "Why should you not be called the big business candidate?"

Ford said his record, in Congress and the White House, proves he shouldn't.

"It was a voting record that called them as I saw them for the benefit of the United States, and as President I've carried on in the same way," he said.

Reagan has made welfare an issue in New Hampshire, contending that his record as governor of California proves he can deal with abuses, take care of the impoverished and still save money.

Reagan has said federal welfare programs should be turned back to the states. That is one of the categories of federal spending he originally targeted for transfer out of Washington in his $90 billion budget cutting proposal. He now says the figure was only an example, the transfer would be gradual and the object is decentralization.

Ford told a questioning student that welfare is a problem because the current system is too complex, and the President said he envisions a single, consolidated program.

"At the present time, there are too many people who are getting welfare and food stamps that don't need them," he said. "On the other hand, too many of the needy are being short-changed."

Ford drew repeated rounds of applause from the student audience, along with apologies for the heckling.

At one point, a girl stepped to the microphone, said she was with the People's Bicentennial Commission and told Ford most Americans believe there should be a movement against the influence of big business. She demanded that he say in a word whether he agreed or not.

"The President started to answer, 'Agree or disagree, Mr. President,' the girl interrupted.

"I was about to say that a question of that kind deserves more than a one word answer," Ford said.

The crowd applauded for 30 seconds. "Boo," the girl said into the microphone, and she walked away.

Reagan was resuming his New Hampshire campaign today and is to appear at a question-and-answer session of his own in the same hall Tuesday night.

At a news conference and in his appearance before the students, Ford also made these points:

—There is no possibility that American forces will become involved in Angola, and the intervention of Cuban troops in that African war "for all intents and purposes has stopped any possibility of U.S.-Cuban relations improving, period."

—He sees "no political ramifications at all" to former President Nixon's planned visit to China starting Feb. 21, just three days before the New Hampshire primary.

Ford also said any similarities between his administration and that of his resigned predecessor "is pure happenstance." Economically, he said, Nixon "didn't have the hard decisions like we had in 1975."

In Concord, he told about 70 supporters and campaign workers that he is confident about the test with Reagan. "It looks like everything's turning up rosy," he said.

Ford also said he isn't promising more than he can deliver. But he had some promises nonetheless. "We have a strong program to put a restraint on the increase in federal spending," he said. "And if we do that then we can have a bona fide bigger tax cut in 1976. We'll balance the budget in 1978, 1979, and we can have an additional tax cut at that time."

11 youngsters

12 killed in train-camper crash

BREESE, Ill. (AP) — Beneath the hospital's soft, fluorescent corridor lights, a few feet inside the door, Mary Ann Hopper lay in a tight ball on the hard floor, screaming, "Why couldn't it have been me?"

She'd learned that two of her three children — 8-year-old daughter Darla and 6-year-old son Toby — were dead.

Soon she would learn that her father, three nephews and a niece were also among the 12 killed in nearby Beckemeyer Saturday night when a freight train smashed into a camper truck loaded with children headed for a roller skating party.

Her father's truck camper was smashed by a 67-car Baltimore & Ohio freight at an unguarded crossing.

A corps of state and federal investigators is trying to piece together details of the collision.

Eleven of the dead were youngsters. The 12th was Henry Lowe, 60, who was taking eight of his grandchildren and five of their friends on a weekly trip.

James Knapp of Beckemeyer, driving across the tracks from the opposite direction, saw the impact.

"It looked like the pickup just exploded," he said Sunday. "I ran up there and I just found dead ones laying all through there."

The train reportedly was traveling at 56 miles an hour, and it took engineer O.J. Coers about four-tenths of a mile to bring the train to a stop. A B&O spokesman said 60 miles per hour is the limit it sets on the Beckemeyer tracks.

A two-man National Transportation Safety Board team flew in from Washington to interview the train crew and witnesses. Also investigating were state and local police, the Illinois Commerce Commission and the railroad.

Crossing signs mark the intersection, but there are no lights, bells or gates. Mayor Clinton Hoffman said the community has tried in the past to improve safety at that crossing and a similar one. Only one of the four crossings in town has gates.

Hoffman said other people have been killed at the intersections but none recently. He said the railroad was responsible for crossing safety devices.

At the hospital, the news of her children's death rendered Mrs. Hopper helpless.

Her fists and forehead pressed against the cold tile floor, she tucked her knees beneath her chest and arched her spine in agony. Her coat was stretched tight across her shoulders.

Two nurses, a Baptist preacher in a sport coat and a Catholic priest in black clerical garb offered comfort.

The preacher, the Rev. Mr. E.D. Hediger, recognized the grieving mother as one of his congregation.

"No," she cried as he spoke. "Oh God, no. Why couldn't it have been me? Why couldn't it have been me?"

A plastic chair was shoved against the pale-green wall.

"No. No. No. No," she shouted as they gently helped her to her feet. "Oh God," she cried. "Why, why, why, why?"

"You know there is no answer to that," the Rev. Mr. Hediger said. "How's my Dad?" she asked.

"He's gone," the preacher said quietly.

"He's gone," she sobbed. The preacher said her father had been driving.

Again she screamed: "No, no!"

"It was a whole truckload," the Rev. Mr. Hediger said. Softly, he recited the names. Three were nephews, one a niece.

"Where's my kids?" she screamed.

"They are not here, now," the preacher said.

The dead besides Henry Lowe, Darla and Toby were Leroy Lowe, 15, and his sister Tara, 4; Craig Lowe, 6; Mark Lowe, 13; Brian Forth, 13; Robert Moorleghen, 13, and his brother, Allen, 15; and Linda McCabe.

Brian Lowe, 10, was in critical condition with multiple fractures and internal injuries.

Robert McCabe Jr., 9, was in fair condition. Mark Forth, 12, was hospitalized with an apparent leg fracture. Gene Lowe, 10, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lowe, was treated and released.

All the Lowes, Forths and Moorleghens are from rural Carlyle. The Hopper children, cousins of the Lowe youngsters, were from Keyesport. Linda McCabe, whose father lives in Winona, Mo., was staying with her uncle in Beckemeyer. Thomas Smith, 18, also killed in the wreck, was from Fairview Heights.

Up 47.8 per cent

Americans work longer to eat

WASHINGTON (AP) — American factory workers continue to enjoy better food purchasing power than their counterparts in 13 foreign countries, but the gap closed a bit last year, according to figures published today by the Agriculture Department.

The figures show that Americans had to work longer to eat last year than in 1974, while the average in other countries declined.

The report said that U.S. industrial workers on the average spent two hours and 16 minutes on the job to earn enough to buy a nine-item list of groceries in 1975, up 47.8 per cent compared with one hour and 32 minutes in 1974.

Samplings made in 13 foreign countries showed that factory workers there averaged four hours and 34 minutes to buy the same amount of food. That was down 5.5 per cent from four hours and 50 minutes, on a 13-country average, from 1974.

These averages mean the foreign workers had to put in more than twice as much time as American workers to pay for the same food. Brought down to a sirloin steak, the figures mean that a U.S. worker averaged about 26 minutes on the job last year to pay for one pound of sirloin, while a Japanese wage-earner worked six hours and 25 minutes. In Argentina, however, a worker spent 11 minutes to earn enough to buy sirloin.

The figures were based on average hourly earnings for workers in manufacturing industries in the United States and the other countries. The average hourly wages, however, were not published. Only the figures showing how long wage-earners had to work in the various countries for specified food items in 1975 were included in the report. There was no analysis or comparison with 1974.

One department spokesman who was asked about the figures said that "no doubt inflation rates were higher in the other countries last year" and speculated that wages probably rose higher than food prices in other countries.

Food prices rose everywhere in 1975, including an average 12-month U.S. gain of 8.5 per cent, according to the USDA. That was down sharply from increases of 14.5 per cent in each of the two previous years.

The 13 countries involved in the figures were West Germany, Brazil, Belgium, Argentina, Australia, Denmark, Great Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Sweden, The Netherlands and Japan.

Ontarian held as burglary suspect

A 20-year-old ONTARIO man was booked in West End Jail this morning in connection with the attempted burglary of Wheel Distributors Co., 1642 S. Bon View Ave., Ontario.

Police said that Edward Eugene Hiner of 1067 E. D St. was arrested outside of the business about 10:57 p.m. Saturday after a silent burglar alarm had been tripped.

Officers found a door open to the business and heard a man in the office. They said the suspect was standing near a desk inside. The suspect ran into the adjoining warehouse and out of the building, police said, but officers searching the warehouse and grounds found the suspect hiding underneath some plastic in the yard.

Hiner was identified by the company owner as a former employee. Hiner said he stopped at the business to see his "boss."

MONTCLAIR police this morning are searching for two men in a late model pickup truck who grabbed an Ontario woman's purse as she was walking to her car parked in the Lucky Discount Supermarket in the Montclair Plaza Saturday.

Police said Mrs. Ann Holland reported the purse snatch about 6 p.m. She told officers that a man grabbed the purse from her arm and ran to an awaiting car.

The purse snatchers are both described as blacks. The passenger was described as being 20 or 22, tall, wearing a blue denim outfit. She was unable to give a further description of the pickup truck driver.

The pickup was described as a gold colored 1967 or 1968 Chevrolet El Camino with a large dark primer spot on the right side.

Quintuplets born in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A 27-year-old Iranian teacher has given birth to quintuplets, doctors said today.

The three girls and two boys born Sunday to Fereshteh-Sadat Davoudzadeh and her husband, an employee of the water and power ministry, were reported in satisfactory condition in incubators.

Doctors said the quints, born after a seven-month pregnancy, weighed from two pounds, 14 ounces to three pounds, 15 ounces.

Five quints also were born in Kagoshima, Japan, a week ago.

There have been a number of births of sextuplets in recent years, but in most cases one or more of the babies died.

Dutch prince named in Lockheed payoff

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands (AP) — "If all this is true, we can wave goodbye to the royal house," said a young woman lawyer after Premier Joop Den Uyl's announcement that Prince Bernhard was the Dutch official accused of receiving $1.1 million to promote the sale of Lockheed aircraft.

"This would be not only a calamity for the royal family but a calamity for the whole nation," said a retired politician.

Other observers said it was premature to speculate about the effect of the scandal on the future of the centuries-old House of Orange.

The Dutch reacted with shock and often with disbelief to the rising storm around Queen Juliana's popular, 64-year-old husband. Many obviously wanted to believe the prince's assertion, reported by Den Uyl, that "he has never received any money and would appreciate a full investigation."

The Socialist premier said that although his government was not implying that Bernhard was "guilty of reprehensible acts," it had concluded that the prince was the high-ranking Dutch official mentioned in testimony Friday before a U.S. Senate subcommittee.

Lockheed's president, A. C. Kottchian, told the subcommittee the company paid the Dutch official $1 million in the early 1960s to promote the sales of F104 Starfighters and P2B antisubmarine planes, and paid him another $100,000 a few years ago. Kottchian did not name the Dutchman.

Den Uyl said his government would probably set up an independent commission to make a speedy investigation of the charge.

Most political parties withheld comment. The Calvinist Christian Historical Union, which has seven of the 150 seats in the lower house of parliament, called for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to ban purchases from Lockheed. The Pacifist Socialist Party, which has no seats, said that if wrongdoing is proven, the prince should resign immediately as inspector-general of the armed forces, an advisory post he has held since 1970.

J. Van Elsen, a conservative member of parliament's defense committee, told reporters, "On the decision to buy Starfighters, I know that Prince Bernhard never advised the government."

A native of Germany, Bernhard was married to Queen Wilhelmina's only daughter in 1937 and during World War II was commander-in-chief of the Dutch armed forces.

Since the war, he has been an unofficial ambassador for The Netherlands abroad and has become known around the world for his presidency of the World Wildlife Foundation. But he also has an active business life helping to manage the Dutch royal family's huge fortune.

NORTH CONWAY, N.H. (AP) — Susan Ford, on her first presidential campaign trip, said she is "non-political" and uncertain that she wants her father to be elected to a full term.

"I haven't decided yet. I think I would, but not if the job gets any tougher," Miss Ford, 18, said in an interview.

"I've seen him age."

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas industrialist Ira Corn has enjoyed owning the only private copy of the 21 original printed copies of the Declaration of Independence. Now that the Bicentennial is here, he likes it all the more.

Corn and his associate, Joseph P. Driscoll, bought the rare document for $404,000 in 1969.

"We like the idea of a copy being west of the Mississippi," he said.

The other 20 original copies are in libraries and archives.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Dan M. Mackey family came home this weekend, one of the fortunate families in Guatemala unscathed by the earthquake.

But Dr. Mackey, 30, and his wife, Helen, 30, are going back Tuesday as part of a medical team to aid the Central American country.

The couple, their 7-year-old son, Colin, and Mrs. Mackey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Velt Sherman of Oklahoma City, were vacationing at a village about 75 miles northwest of Guatemala City when the first quake occurred Wednesday.

"I was kind of awake when I heard a little rumbling. I got up and then it just really hit. You think the world is coming to an end," Mrs. Mackey recalled Sunday.

Call U. S. 'sick society'

U.S. book shocks Czech students

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) — Prof. George Held, an American teaching American literature here, says he assigned his students to read William Burroughs' sexually bizarre "Naked Lunch" and they were "overwhelmed by the immorality and obscenity." Some of the students commented that only a "sick society" could produce a book like that, he said in an interview.

Held, a 40-year-old Fulbright lecturer at Prague's Charles University, added that he feels no compulsion to justify his choice of books for students from a tightly controlled Communist society. "I teach the same books here that I teach in America," he said. "These books have made a place for themselves in literary history or represent a cause that has come of age. I don't teach a book because of overt political considerations or eliminate them because of some political judgment."

In the case of "Naked Lunch," Held attempted to give his Czech students an appreciation of the writer's "genius of language" and to explain the work "in the context of Burroughs' perverse aesthetic." The novel, not available in Czech bookshops, was ordered for the class through the U.S. Embassy.

"I tend to follow the students' reactions wherever I teach," Held remarked. "If a work repels or bores them, I remove it from the syllabus." Held, who studied at Brown and Hawaii universities, is on leave from Queens College in New York City. He previously taught and earned his doctorate at Rutgers. He is a native of Scarsdale, N.Y.

"Naked Lunch" was the only avant-garde work that completely repelled the eight students in his Prague seminar on contemporary American literature of the last 20 years. He also teaches a required course on American authors that has 18 students enrolled. The authors covered in the two courses range from Washington Irving to Allen Ginsberg.

Held said his Czech superiors have given him a free hand.

"They told me I'm qualified and I should teach what's significant."

His choice of books was questioned only once — by the Americans and not the Czechs. When a special allotment of U.S. funds became available, he ordered books through the American Embassy that were not on the U.S. Information Service's approved list for Czechoslovakia. Among the books, he recalls, was Norman Mailer's "Marilyn."

"I was asked to write a defense of my choices. I didn't write it," Held nevertheless received the books.

"The best apology for American literature," Held maintained, is that it deals with such social sores as the destruction of the landscape, decay of the cities and the breakdown in communications within society.

"One problem of contemporary American literature," as Held sees it, "is that it is not political enough."

Yet, "by its nature American literature is subversive," Held said. "There are people in America who don't like these texts. Here I put them into historic perspective."

The works interest his students "if they see problems dramatized in American literature that have analogues in their own country. Obviously, we don't discuss that."

Held, who had been active in anti-Vietnam war protests in the United States, regards his life during the 2½ years he has spent in Czechoslovakia to have been "virtually as free as my life in America — with the important exception that I don't have a political life here ... I understand I'm in a politically volatile situation and I try not to be provocative."

Held is anxious to insure that the Fulbright program is continued here as well as in other East European countries, including the Soviet Union.

Classroom discussions here, Held said, "can be as lively as in America — when one considers English is their second language and some of the texts are very difficult. They had a lot of trouble with Emerson and Thoreau." The two 19th century individualists were regarded as "too egotistical" by the Czech students, he said.

He conceded, however, that the students "try to keep their responses narrowed to the problems of the texts."

The American professor said he is certain that, if a Communist party functionary were to monitor the lectures, he "would not find anything amiss."

Held spent one year at the university in Bratislava, where he was limited to English language instruction.

Bethany Church setting for rites

The Bethany Baptist Church in Montclair was the setting for the marriage of Miss Eunie Turner of Montclair and Roger Pollock of Montclair.

The couple was married by the Rev. Donald Bray in a double-ring afternoon ceremony followed by a reception held at the home of the bride's parents in Montclair.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry D. Turner, Jr. of Montclair. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Pollock of Montclair.

Miss Cindy Turner of Montclair was honor attendant.

Serving as best man was David Pollock of Montclair.

Bridesmaids were the Misses Monica Cenamo, Carrie Johnson and Roberta Spraklin.

Ushers were Robert Oglesby, Cliff Matheus and Mario Orioli.

The newlyweds honeymooned in San Francisco and will be at home in Concord.

MRS. ROGER POLLOCK

Westmont women to meet

A program illustrating the use of fine arts in the Christian church, past and present, will be presented by Mrs. Ann Bakker for the Westmont United Methodist Women at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday at the church.

A business meeting and social hour will be a part of the evening program, along with a valentine exchange. There will be no separate meeting during the month for Lamplighters and Susannah Wesley circles.

Sale will assist Bolivians

Mrs. Ruth Kramer will bring an assortment of Bolivian handcraft items for a sale to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Mueller, 3975 Emerald Ave., La Verne, Thursday, from 10:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Knitted garments of alpaca for men, women and children will be available. There will be ponchos, capes, skirts, pullovers and cardigan sweaters. Other articles are wall hangings of colorful applique on homespun wool, pillow covers, woven bags and belts, God's eye, dolls and toy llamas.

Money derived from the sale goes back to the artisans and the autonomous Methodist Church for social service projects.

Mrs. Kramer, who grew up in Pomona, was a missionary to Bolivia for a number of years. The sale is her way of helping the Bolivian people.

A second sale will be held Friday at the United Methodist Church in Hemet.

Potluck set by OES unit

The past matrons, past patrons and trailers of Star of the West Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, have planned a potluck dinner at 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Powers, 1015 Whitman Ave., Claremont.

Guests will bring a hot dish, salad or dessert and their own table service.

Thursday meeting charted by BPW

Montclair High School students who attended the youth conference in November in Yucaipa will present the program when the Montclair Heights Business and Professional Women's Club holds a dinner meeting at 7 p.m., Thursday, at the Phoenix Restaurant, Montclair.

February has been designated by the president for a membership drive and members will bring guests to the meeting.

Reports will be presented by Mrs. Arthur Novelli, Mrs. Arthur Fies and Mrs. Betty Wicker on the BPW winter conference.

Guest night set Tuesday by club

At the annual guest night dinner planned by the Upland Woman's Club for 6:30 p.m., Tuesday, the program will be "Love, Laughter and Song" to be presented by Kay St. Germain and George Goulding.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barry will be greeting guests at the door.

In charge of February activities are: Mmes. James Johnson, B. G. Klepper, Frederic Maurer, Nellis McNeil, William Amberson, Edwin Ayres, C. O. Beeman, Raymond Berry, Thyra Hodge, C. P. Jacobs, Domenick Nillo, Loren Robinson, James Davidson, Edwin Dean, Robert Herron, John Scott, David Wright, Clyde Mackall and Misses Florence Andrews, Nita Weinrobe, Gladys Claypool and Mary Horner.

The average adult has enough iron in his body to make a two-inch nail.

The Feb. 24 tea at the clubhouse will include a book review from The Bookworm of Upland.

"One" I thought a lovely age.
"Two" seemed better still.
"Three" Ah, that's life's golden stage.
Rich with many a thrill!
Then, as many a gray-haired man,
Foolish to the core,
Vowed there's nothing lovelier than Little girls of four.
"Four" the time of sparkling eyes,
Twinkling with delight,
Everything a glad surprise.
Life exactly right.
Rimping all the hours away,
"Time can have in store
Nothing lovelier," I'd say.
"Then this age of Four"
Now that year has come and gone,
Never more to be,
Still the charms I look upon
Glorious to see.
Still those eyes with gladness glow,
Still those charms survive!
All the radiance "four" could show
Lovelier seems at five.

Mornings

Breakfast is probably more of a habit than an eating experience, especially with today's lifestyles. Time seems too short in the morning to make breakfast a grand experience. But it is one experience you shouldn't skip. Eat a well-balanced cereal breakfast and give yourself time to enjoy it. Try a nutritious breakfast of fruit or juice, a bowl of fortified oat flakes with milk, toast with butter or margarine, and milk to drink.

Almanac

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, Feb. 9, the 40th day of 1976. There are 326 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1718, French colonists arrived in Louisiana.

On this date:
In 1773, William Harrison, the ninth American president, was born in Charles City County, Virginia.

In 1825, the U.S. House of Representatives elected John Quincy Adams President after an election in which none of the candidates received an electoral majority.

In 1870, the U.S. Weather Bureau was established.

In 1942, the former French liner, "Normandie" burned and capsized at a New York pier as it was being outfitted as a troop transport.

In 1943, the World War II Battle of Guadalcanal in the Pacific ended in an American victory.

In 1962, Jamaica became an independent nation within the British Commonwealth.

Ten years ago: Vice President Hubert Humphrey went to Saigon on a special mission to spur action in South Vietnam on programs attacking hunger, disease and illiteracy.

Five years ago: An earthquake in the Los Angeles area killed at least 64 persons, most of them trapped in a veterans' hospital.

One year ago: Two Soviet cosmonauts returned safely to earth after 30 days in orbit around the earth.

Today's birthdays: Former Secretary of State Dean Rusk is 67. Sportsman Bill Veech is 62.

Thought for today: The trouble with most people is that they listen with their mouths — Anonymous.

Bicentennial footnote: Two hundred years ago today, Gen. George Washington sent a message from his Cambridge, Mass. headquarters to the Continental Congress in Philadelphia, complaining of a lack of funds, recruits, arms and ammunition. He said that more than 2,000 of his troops lacked firearms.

2 types of employee business expenses

By Ray De Crane
(Eighth in a Series)

Employee business expenses fall in two categories. Some are "adjustment to income" items claimed before adjusted gross income is determined. Others may be claimed only on Schedule A if the taxpayer is itemizing his deductions.

For most employees, the expenses which may be claimed against gross income are those for transportation, travel and meals and lodging while away from home at least overnight. All other employee business expense, such as business entertainment, gifts to customers and splitting of commissions, go on Schedule A.

A major exception to this general rule occurs in the case of anyone who qualifies as an "outside salesperson." (This classification has always been "outside salesman" in the past. The new terminology is IRS' concession to the women's liberation movement.)

An outside salesperson is anyone whose principal business function is to solicit business away from his employer's place of business. He is permitted to claim as a gross income adjustment all of his ordinary and necessary business expenses without exception. A manufacturer's representative is a typical example of one meeting the requirements.

Here are typical examples of an outside salesperson's expenses which may be claimed: all automobile and other travel, entertainment expense attributed to his business, telephone and telegraph charges, the extra charge for a telephone answering device in his home or office, hotel rooms and meals while away from home, laundering and dry cleaning while traveling plus reasonable tips. With the exception of meals, he can claim all such expenses even if he is not away from home overnight.

So-called "business lunches" where a customer is entertained over a business discussion in the hopes of producing orders qualify even if in-town.

In arriving at his automobile deduction, a salesperson may use either of two methods. After determining the percentage of his total driving which represents his business driving, he may apply that percentage to his total cost of operating the car. That would include annual depreciation, cost of gas and oil, repairs, insurance, tires and accessories, license tags, car washings.

If business driving represented 85 per cent of his total driving for the year, 85 per cent of his total car expenses would be deductible.

Under the alternative method, he can apply the standard mileage rate of 15 cents a mile thereafter. Whichever method is used, add to your total the actual cost of parking and toll charges related to business use.

Quality items available only in the West

Russians miss their furs and vodka

MOSCOW (AP) — A Russian sable or mink coat is easy to find in a fur salon on Fifth Avenue in New York, but impossible to locate in a fur shop on Gorky Street in Moscow.

Though staggeringly expensive, Russian caviar can be bought with little trouble in the West. Russians say it is extremely difficult to find in their own country.

The quality Russian brands of Vodka — Stolichnaya and Moskovskaya — are sold in many large liquor stores in the United States. Vodka lovers here haven't been able to buy them in their stores for five years.

These luxury goods are uniquely Russian, but they and many others have virtually vanished from Soviet shelves.

Instead, the caviar, vodka, furs and other goods are sent to the West in exchange for hard currency which will buy the advanced machinery and technology the Soviet Union lacks.

Though not openly critical, many Russians are not happy that the goods most identified with the history and culture of their country are nowhere to be found.

"People are not satisfied with this policy," said one Soviet. "It would be better to increase the price for us and let us buy these things than send them out of the Soviet Union."

In fact, authorities did double the price of such luxury goods as caviar, furs and jewelry two years ago. But the hiked prices are academic, since many of the items are almost nonexistent in Russian stores.

A Soviet woman, looking at advertisements of Russian furs in an American fashion magazine, recalled her childhood, when fur pelts, hats and collars were stacked in huge piles in shops.

"But then most people didn't have money to buy them. Now we have the money but not the furs," she said.

At the Pushkinsky state fur farm near Moscow, said to be the biggest of its kind in the world, 110,000 sables, minks and foxes are raised each year for export.

According to official statistics, 58.6 million rubles — $87.7 million — worth of furs were sent outside the country in 1974.

A Muscovite says that on the rare occasions when ordinary fur hats like muskrat are available in a Moscow store, they're sold out within minutes.

Russians also remember nostalgically when they were able to smear caviar on bread for breakfast in the days after World War II or buy as much caviar as they wanted for nine rubles a kilo — 2.2 pounds.

Now, thanks to the official thirst for hard currency, coupled with pollution and overfishing, black caviar has all but vanished from the menu of the average Russian and is only occasionally available in restaurants. When it can be found, it costs 45 rubles — $59 — a kilo.

(A dealer in New York said top quality black Russian caviar sells in the United States for $250 to $260 a kilo. Macy's in New York sells the top quality Russian vodka for $7.15 and $8.15 a fifth.)

Crab, another national delicacy, used to be available here for the asking. Now it's rare, because most of it goes abroad.

When Stolichnaya and Moskovskaya vodkas began disappearing from stores in 1970, newer vodkas took their places, some at higher prices and none up to the quality of the older ones.

Russians were not told that the premium brands of their national drink were being exported.

Russians also complain that many works of folk artists, which used to be plentiful, have almost vanished from their stores.

The folk art includes lacquered black, red and gold wooden objects, highly decorated boxes and toys, imaginative little figures made of papier mache and clay.

These items, however, abound in the special foreign currency stores for tourists here and can be found in shops in London, New York and other Western cities.

Even tickets to the Bolshoi Theater, the Soviet Union's most noted cultural attraction, can be extremely difficult to obtain for the average Soviet, particularly during prime tourist seasons.

During the recent annual winter festival, the theater was full of tourists and foreign residents of Moscow, while many Russians tried in vain to buy tickets as New Year's presents for themselves.

Not all Soviets, however, have problems in obtaining Russian luxury goods. Senior military officers, Communist party officials and government bureaucrats have special stores which stock these items — stores which are off limits to the average citizen.

Many of these privileged people also have access to the special foreign currency shops, where the sight of caviar, crab and Stolichnaya vodka is not a rarity at all.

What a Wonderful Way to LOSE FAT

The "MODEL-ETTS" way helps curb your appetite.

- Helps You Lose That Extra Weight!
- No calorie counting
- No special diets
- No exercises!

Thanks to a group of New York doctors, you can now lose pounds of ugly fat without going on any special diet, without cutting out any special foods. HELPS REDUCE HUNGRY MOMENTS.

These New York doctors discovered a food adjunct called "MODEL-ETTS."

"Model-etts" does remarkable things. It helps you cut down your caloric intake by a natural automatic curbing of the appetite and of the desire for foods, resulting automatically in a reduced intake of food.

So, start today to shed those unwanted pounds and inches. If your condition is glandular or organic, see your doctor. "Model-etts" may help you stay on the diet your doctor recommends. Ask him about it.

You can get a trial size supply of "Model-etts" for $3.00 on money back guarantee. In clinical tests, "Model-etts" was 96% successful. "Model-etts" may not be 100% successful in all cases, but you take no risk in trying "Model-etts" on our Money Back Guarantee.

Come to any General Nutrition store to get "MODEL-ETTS." The sooner you start, the sooner you may have the loss of weight you yearn for.

Sounds too good to be true, BUT IT IS TRUE!

HOW MODEL-ETTS CURBS YOUR APPETITE

In the opinion of the supervising physician, based on the average of weight losses in the clinical tests, his calculations showed that 1 Model-etts Wafer has the hunger-satisfying capacity of 1 pound boiled potatoes or 4 eggs or 5 slices of white bread, yet it contains only 6 calories.

Vermeil era at UCLA ends abruptly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We had talked about winning a national championship and how long it would take to get it," Dick Vermeil said of a conservation with UCLA Athletic Director J.D. Morgan.

"Now I've jumped ship on him. I know some people will be upset with me."

Sunday's announcement that Vermeil will leave his coaching job at UCLA to take the helm of the Philadelphia Eagles caught almost everywhere by surprise—including, Vermeil says, himself.

"I wasn't that interested and I had no intention of leaving UCLA," Vermeil said of the Eagles' offer. He reportedly had declined the job as late as Friday night, but decided Saturday to take it. He phoned Morgan, who was in Pullman, Wash., for a UCLA basketball game, to inform him of his decision Saturday night.

Morgan said Sunday he had given "no thought" to naming a replacement for Vermeil, since his decision to take the Eagles job came as a surprise.

Morgan said, "It would appear that the Philadelphia Eagles football organization made him an offer he couldn't refuse."

The offer was reportedly $1 million over a five-year period.

Two Bruin assistants, offensive coach Terry Donahue and defensive coordinator Lynn Sholes, are believed to have given Stites at the post vacated by Vermeil, and the man who gets the job will have a difficult act to follow.

If UCLA officials and fans are upset over Vermeil's decision to leave UCLA, it will be because of his success during his brief tenure.

His two-year coaching career in Westwood was capped by the Bruins' stunning 23-10 upset over unbeaten and top-ranked Ohio State in the Rose Bowl this past New Year's Day. In a regular season meeting, the Buckeyes swamped UCLA 41-20, and were a 14-point favorite to whip the Bruins in the rematch in Pasadena.

Vermeil, 39, served his apprenticeship under some very successful coaches. He began his coaching career as an assistant at Del Mar High in San Jose in 1959 after graduating from San Jose State.

He made rapid progress, joining John Ralston's staff at Stanford in 1965 after head coaching jobs at the high school and junior college levels.

Later jobs took him to the Rams, first under George Allen, then later under Tommy Prothro and Chuck Knox. He also spend a year as an assistant to Prothro at UCLA, and returned to take the head coaching job at UCLA in 1974.

In his first season at the Bruins' helm, Vermeil guided the team to a 6-3-2 record, barely missing the Rose Bowl by losing the final game of the season to national champion USC.

This past season, UCLA was 9-2-1, and, following the Rose Bowl victory, a number of Bruin players said they thought a football dynasty might be in the making.

The "dynasty," if there is one, will have to continue without the man who started it. Vermeil has another big job on his hands.

HEADING FOR PHILLY

UCLA football coach Dick Vermeil talks with sportswriters Sunday at his office after the Philadelphia Eagles hired him as new head coach with a five-year contract. Vermeil, 39, had coached two seasons at UCLA and led the Bruins to a Rose Bowl victory this year.

Johnny Miller new Nicklaus?

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The inevitable question came up in the wake of Johnny Miller's brilliant triumph in the Bob Hope Desert Golf Classic:

How does Johnny Miller compare with Jack Nicklaus?

This time-on contrast to some of his observations of the last two years—Johnny Miller was having none of it.

"I don't want to be compared to Jack," said Miller, who has moved to the fore as the heir-apparent to Nicklaus' reign as pro golf's premier performer.

"I might win as many tournaments as Jack, but I'll never win as many major tournaments."

And he even has quite a ways to go in that respect.

Miller's nine-under-par 63-the best round in more than 12 months of tour activity—provided him with a three-stroke victory, put him past a milestone and nailed down his 17th American tour title Sunday.

Rik Massengale made a gritty, last round challenge until Miller rolled in an 18 foot, downhill birdie putt on the 16th green. He finished second with a 67-347. Vietnam veteran Buddy Allin was third at 67-348.

Jim Colbert, who had an amazing 28 on his last nine, Jerry Heard and Dave Nauvart were at 351. Colbert had a 64, Heard 67 and Nauvart 69.

Arnold Palmer, a five-time winner of this tournament, withdrew after three rounds because of the death of his father.

The victory put Miller 41 tournaments behind Nicklaus. He'd have to average five a year for the next eight years he'd be 36-Jack's present age at that time to be close even if Jack never wins again.

In the matter of the majors—the U.S. and British Opens, the Masters and PGA-Miller would face an all-but-impossible task. Nicklaus has won 14. Miller has won one. Only Nicklaus has won more than 11. Even if Johnny won that many, he'd still be short.

But that's not a goal.

"I'd like to win the Masters this year. I really want to win it. I've been so close one shot back of Nicklaus last season a couple of times, that's a real goal for me."

"But I'm not major tournament-oriented the way Jack is. I just want to win any tournament. And I want to win as many as I can."

He is achieving that goal amazingly well. In the last 26 months—since the start of the 1974 season—this quiet, soft-spoken young man has annexed 14 American tour titles and two foreign crowns. No one else has come close. In that period he has won $633,509, a figure that is unapproached.

The victory was fashioned in typical Miller style. He started the final day two strokes out. He had a share of the lead by the fifth hole. He had the lead alone by the eighth hole.

He wasn't headed again and won it going away.

He didn't make a bogey. He didn't miss a green. He didn't have a "5" on his card. He had the best round on the tour since he, himself, shot a 61 at Tucson more than a year ago.

He won with a 344 total, 16 under par for this unique, 90-hole, five-day, four-course event. It was his second title of the year and seventh in nine starts on desert layouts.

And, importantly for Miller, it came in a tournament in which Nicklaus was competing. Jack, only one shot back going into the last round, never really got untracked. He had to work hard for a round of par 72 on the wet and soggy, 6,532 yard Indian Wells Country Club course and finished eight shots back at 352.

Poly cagers remain busy

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

Cal Poly will complete the non-conference portion of its basketball schedule the next two nights and it can't come quick enough for Coach Don Hogan's team.

The Broncos will host Chapman College at Kellogg Gym tonight then visit the University of San Diego Tuesday night. Both games have 8 p.m. tipoffs.

With Poly bidding for its first cage title in the California Collegiate Athletic Association, the non-league contests are certainly taking a backseat in the matter of importance.

Poly saw an eight-game win streak go down the drain last when the Broncos were upset by San Francisco State and Azusa Pacific in a pair of non-league games.

But the Broncos came back Friday night to edge Cal State Los Angeles, 76-75, in an overtime thriller to take a two-game lead in the CCAA at the halfway point in the conference race.

It's the same situation this week. After the two non-league games, the Broncos start the second round of CCAA play Friday night at Cal State L.A. in an early rematch.

With a 5-0 record, Poly enjoys a two-game edge over both Cal State L.A. and Cal State Bakersfield. Defending champion UC Riverside and Cal State Northridge are both three back and Cal Poly San Luis Obispo is out of the chase at 0-5.

While it's hard to tell if Poly will play with any emotion tonight, there's no question Chapman will be ready.

The Panthers, 14-7 for the season, are bidding for an at-large berth in the NCAA Division II playoffs and a win over the CCAA leaders would be a big boost. Chapman enjoys the best record of the independents on the West Coast.

Chapman features the tallest player in the nation on the Division II level in center Guy Kinsley, who stands 7-2½. The big man is averaging 10 points and nine rebounds per game.

Coach Rich Rider's other starters are forwards Lenard Prewitt (6-5) and Greg Hey (6-5) plus guards Mike Adams (6-4) and Clarence Clark (6-3). Prewitt leads Chapman in scoring (17.1) and rebounding (13.2).

Pomona isn't exactly one of the exotic visits for Chapman this season. Rider's club recently toured Alaska and Hawaii in an interesting trip.

Chapman comes to Pomona after suffering an 89-84 overtime loss at Northridge Saturday night.

Poly will be in for a tough battle at San Diego Tuesday. The Broncos beat USD, 78-70, here two weeks ago, but the Toreros are much tougher on their home court.

USD, also bidding for an at-large berth, is 11-9 for the season after beating UC Riverside, 73-56, Saturday night.

Poly guard Joe Sills, who sank the winning free throw Friday with three seconds on the clock in the overtime, continues to move up on the scoring lists.

The senior from St. Louis has totaled 863 career points in his brief two years at Poly to rate third on the all-time list behind Vermont McKinnon (872) and Paul Scrantom (1,040).

Sills is also fourth on the list of most points in a season with 468. He needs 133 in the final seven games to break the school record of 601 set by David Jones in 1967.

INNSBRUCK (AP) — American Alpine skier Philip Mahre moved into surprisingly strong medal contention today, after the sixth day of the 12th Winter Olympic Games was marred by a doping incident which cost a Russian skier her medal.

Mahre, of White Pass, Wash., finished fourth in the first run of the men's giant slalom with a time of 1 minute, 45.58 seconds. He trailed defending champion Gustavo Thoeni of Italy, who clocked 1:44.19, and a pair of Swiss skiers, Ernst Good and Heini Hemmi.

The second run of the giant slalom will be held Tuesday when Mahre's combined time over the two runs will determine whether he can move into the top three.

"I like the hill a lot better over there," he said, looking forward to Tuesday's race on a nearby course. "I think it's going to be a good run. It's a little steeper with not as much side hill. They'll have to make the gates closer together, and it will come out a lot quicker. It will be a lot easier."

Philip's twin brother, Steven Mahre, was 14th in 1:47.90, and Greg Jones of Tahoe City, Calif., was 16th in 1:48.09.

Earlier today, the International Olympic Committee announced it had stripped Soviet skier Galina Kulakova of the bronze medal she won Saturday in the five-kilometer cross-country race. A medical examination showed she had taken a drug called Ephedrine, banned by the IOC.

However, the Russians retained the medal when it was awarded to Mrs. Kulakova's teammate, Nina Baldicheva. And the IOC said Mrs. Kulakova would not be banned from further competition.

The 33-year-old Mrs. Kulakova, a five-time world champion, had been suffering from a cold and apparently took the drug without knowing it was forbidden, said the IOC Medical Commission president, Prince Alexandre de Merode of Belgium.

Ephedrine is a nasal decongestant. It is a commonly used substance on race horses in the United States, but illegal. Yet it wears off after three days—so if a horse has a cold, it can be given the drug and raced three days later.

"It was such a small amount that it seemed almost an injustice to take the medal away," Prince de Merode said. "However, if we are to have a medical commission and rules, we must enforce them."

Mrs. Kulakova, a veteran of more than 10 years' competition, did not appear at the medals presentation Sunday night. Soviet officials said at the time that she had been detained by traffic. It was later learned, however, that she had been summoned to a medical commission hearing.

It was the first such incident of these Games but was not unprecedented. In the 1972 Summer Games at Munich, American swimmer Rick DeMont was stripped of his gold medal when he took a banned drug to ease his asthma.

East Germany, meanwhile, continued its assault on the Soviet Union's medals lead, picking up a fifth gold with a victory by Ulrich Wehling in the Nordic combined event today. The East Germans also have four silver and three bronze for 12 medals. The Soviets have seven gold, two silver and five bronze for a total of 14. The United States is third with six—one gold, three silver and two bronze.

Urban Hettich of West Germany won the silver medal and Konrad Winkler of East Germany finally took the bronze after some confusion over the third-place standing. Winkler originally had been awarded the bronze, but then Finland's Rauno Mittenen was moved up to third. Officials later reversed themselves and gave the bronze back to Winkler.

The Nordic combines a 70-meter ski jump—which Wehling won Sunday—and a 15-kilometer (9.3-mile) ski racing—which Hettich won today in 48:01.55.

Jim Galanes of Brattleboro, Vt., was the top U.S. finisher in the 33-man field, placing 17th. Mike Devecka of Bend, Ore., was 28th and Walter Malmquist of Post Mills, Vt., was 29th.

On Sunday, Cindy Nelson of Lutsen, Minn., gave the United States its second bronze with her surprising finish in the women's downhill.

"I'm happy with the bronze medal," said the 20-year-old daredevil after finishing behind Rosi Mittermaier of West Germany, and Austria's Brigitte Totschnig. "But I hope to get a silver or a gold before I leave Innsbruck."

If Miss Nelson could win medals in both the slalom on Wednesday and the giant slalom Friday, she could become only the second American to win three medals. Sheila Young, the Detroit, Mich. speed skater from Detroit, took her third medal Saturday with a third in the 1,000 meters.

The surprising performance by Miss Nelson and the strong challenge by the young Philip Mahre could go a long way in boosting the United States to its best total medal count since the 1932 Winter Olympics in Lake Placid, N.Y. That year, the Americans won six gold medals, finishing with 12—double their count so far in these Games.

The Russians won two more golds on Sunday as double gold medal winner Tatiana Averina won the 3,000-meter speed skating race and Nikolai Sajukov won the 15-kilometer cross-country event.

The only chance for the Americans to increase their medal count today comes this evening when Colleen O'Connor and Jim Millins, both of Colorado Springs, Colo., pair in the finals of the ice dancing competition.

Hacienda cagers in action today

The Bearcats (8-2 in league play, 15-6 on the year) figure to have little trouble with the Dons (1-9, 4-14), who are tied with Sierra Vista for last place. Sierra Vista finally won its first league game of the year Friday in a 63-56 decision over Gladstone.

Bonita has bested everyone in the league except Alta Loma to this point, and breezed to a 70-49 win at Sierra Vista seven games ago.

Alta Loma (10-0, 21-1) likewise should have an easy time extending its 15-game winning streak against Gladstone (5-5, 11-10). The Braves rolled over the Gladiators, 59-38, the last time the two teams met.

Gladstone has lost five of its last seven games, while Alta Loma's last setback was a 72-63 loss to Garey in the Upland-Montclair tourney in December.

Ontario (6-4, 11-10) will have to defeat Royal Oak (5-5, 8-12) today to retain sole possession of third place. The Jaguars gave Bonita a rough time Friday night before bowing, 79-73.

Royal Oak nipped Ontario, 69-68, in the first round of league play, but the Romans have won just two of six games since that meeting.

San Dimas (1-9, 1-17) will try for its second win of the year against Walnut (4-6, 8-14). The Saints have only a 50-48 victory over Sierra Vista under their belts, but Walnut too has been disappointing after two perfect (14-0) league seasons in a row.

Wednesday's schedule will send

Bonita to San Dimas, Alta Loma to Sierra Vista, Gladstone to Walnut and Royal Oak to Walnut, all at 8 p.m.

BOSTON	Marvin Hagler, 160	Brooklyn, Mass., knocked out Matt	Donovan, 160, Trinidad, 2

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — George Navonod comes of thoroughbred equine extraction, but for the Irish hunch-bettors, he meant big money because Navonod is Donovan Spelled backwards.

And mud in the eyes meant victory at Santa Anita on Sunday, so the Irish might also be hoping for rain next March 7 when the $250,000 Santa Anita Handicap is run.

George Navonod, a star as a 2-year-old but injured last year, surprised most by winning the $121,900 Charles H. Strub Stakes at 9-1, beating Larrikin and Bill Shoemaker by three lengths.

Owned by Frank Donovan and named for his grandson in Kalamazoo, Mich., George Navonod frequently had pulled up in ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Fernando Toro explained, "The reason he didn't pull himself up this time was that he couldn't see where he was because of all the mud that had accumulated in his blinkers."

Toro had so much mud in his own eyes he had to withdraw from the final race.

Trainer Gordon Campbell said he didn't know the exact schedule for Navonod, but he expected that he would be entered in the Santa Anita Handicap.

The Sunday program honored Shoemaker, winner of 111 races of $100,000 or more with the first one 25 years ago in the Santa Anita Maturity — the predecessor to the Strub Stakes.

Larrikin was three lengths ahead of Navonod turning for home before the stretch drive.

"He was right behind Shoe at the quarter-pole," Toro said of Navonod. "He must have made up 15 lengths overall."

Shoemaker said Larrikin nearly fell down in the final furlong and had become very tired in the heavy and sloppy going.

The time for the 1 1/4-mile was 2:12, slowest ever for this race, and the favorite wound up far back as a fifth straight day of rain in Southern California held the crowd to 30,785.

Navonod returned $20.40, $7.40 and $5.20, with Larrikin at $4.80 and $4.20 and Dancing Gun at $2.20.

Avatar, second in the Kentucky Derby and winner of the Belmont last year, went off as the 5-2 favorite but finished fourth with Braulio Baeza riding.

Baeza flew from Florida to take the mount when Laffit Pincay Jr. started a suspension.

"I was pleased with the play of both Freeman and Washington tonight," said Sharman. Freeman had 19 points and Washington 8.

"Donnie just came off the injured list Tuesday and Kermit, in addition to playing forward, is our backup to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. He may not give us the offense that Kareem does but Kermit is a fine defensive player."

"I'm hoping that their return will get us going for the playoff push ahead," said Sharman.

Gail Goodrich led the Lakers with 24 points, 10 of these in their final quarter, while Jabbar added 22 points. Lou Hudson led Atlanta with 22.

"The key to the win was that we controlled the boards and we were able to trigger the fast break when we needed it in the final period," said Sharman.

The Hawks, who trailed by as many as 16 points early in the third period, got to within 79-75 with 5:39 left before the Lakers reeled off 10 points in the next 1 1/2 minutes to put the game out of reach.

In that span, Goodrich and the Lakers easily broke the Hawks press and the Los Angeles guard got three easy lay-ups.

"There were some missed assignments," said Fitzsimmons. "I don't know who was at fault."

Jabbar left the contest with three minutes to play with a stiff neck but is not believed serious.

"It was a muscle spasm and I couldn't turn my neck," he said. "It's never happened before and it still doesn't feel too good."

ATLANTA — (AP) — Atlanta Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons was moaning about "hard times" and injuries after his Hawks lost to Los Angeles, but no one could blame Laker Coach Bill Sharman for not being sympathetic.

Sharman's club had just gone through a similar experience. But he could smile Sunday night after his Lakers snapped a four-game losing streak in a 97-89 National Basketball Association victory over the slumping Hawks, who have lost three in a row.

"I told them not to quit," said Fitzsimmons after the loss. "We're going into hard times. We're playing without one of our centers (injured Dwight Jones) who has started most of our games."

"We also are without Dean Meminger (injured list) and lost Tom Ghenardson, who sprained his ankle in the first half."

But Sharman who has been that route recently, is hoping that the victory, only the fifth for Los Angeles in 19 games, and the return of Donnie Freeman from the injured list and Kermit Washington, still recovering from a broken leg, will gear a late-charge to the play-offs.

Canadian Sandy Hawley, who many thought would get the Avatar ride, wound up on the sidelines for this big race despite having four winners on Saturday and four on Sunday.

His Saturday slate included Lightning Mandate, who won the $54,750 San Pasqual Handicap at 1-16th miles and paid $9. Guards Up finished second with Ga Hai third.

Sunday, Toro had Navonod back in sixth place in the field of eight before he made his big move.

Messenger of Song and Forceten set the early pace, but wound up in the final two places.

Shoemaker, who had a 3-1 shot in Larrikin, commented, "I thought I was going to win this one. About the quarter-pole, he started loafing and pricking his ears and then just got very tired."

George Navonod's trainer, Campbell said he had no special instructions for Toro except, "stay as close as possible without tiring him."

George Navonod got into the race carrying 115 pounds compared with the high, of 125 for Avatar and Forceten, and 118 for Larrikin, the winner of last year's Del Mar Derby.

All told, Shoemaker had five mounts on the afternoon named in his honor, and finished second twice and third once.

George Navonod boosted his lifetime earnings to $341,820 with the $76,900 top purse. Second place was worth $20,000.

A winner of five lifetime stakes, Navonod took four of them as a 2-year-old and this year captured the El Monte Handicap at Santa Anita on Jan. 14.

Who would you say was the youngest person ever to lead a major league in home runs at the end of any season?

Answer is Tony Conigliaro who won the home run title of the American League in 1965 at the age of 20, and thereby became the youngest home champ in big league history.

Has any basketball team ever gone through an entire game and not scored a point?

It seems hard to believe, but there have been several games in basketball history when one team was shut out. And, some years ago, a Memphis, Tenn., church team set what must be a record when they shutout TWO opponents in one season, winning one game 78-0 and another 36-0.

The Olympics have been held in the United States four times in history. Do you know when and where in the U.S.? The winter Olympics were at Lake Placid in 1932 and at Squaw Valley in 1960. The summer Olympics were held in St. Louis in 1904 and in Los Angeles in 1932.

I'll bet you didn't know... Midas installs mufflers and shock absorbers on most foreign cars with the same expertise they have on American cars for over 18 years.

Disqualifications rock Daytona 500

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A.J. Foyt, Darrell Waltrip and Dave Marcis were disqualified after being found to be using illegal equipment in qualifying runs Sunday for the Daytona 500 stock car classic.

Because of the disqualifications, the pole position and its $5,000 prize were given to Iowa corn farmer Ramo Stott, the fourth fastest qualifier.

The Associated Press learned the development minutes after lengthy inspections were completed on the cars of all four top qualifiers for the $350,000 Feb. 15 speed classic, the biggest prize in NASCAR Grand National racing.

There was no confirmation as to whether any of the three would attempt to requalify their cars for the field.

Stett, the reigning U.S. Auto Club stock car champion, was staying at a nearby trailer park and was not available for comment.

According to a statement, "NASCAR officials found that car No. 28 Foyt and car No. 88 Waltrip were set up for use of fuel pressure assists which are not allowed.

"Car No. 71 Marcis was equipped with a non-approved radiator stoppage."

Foyt had recorded an unbelievable at least to officials-speed of 187.477 miles per hour in his Hoss Ellington - prepared Chevrolet. Waltrip ran 186.617 mph in an almost identical Chevrolet and Marcis turned 186.548 mph.

But after that, the speeds dropped off dramatically — down to Stett's Chevrolet at 183.456 mph.

The dispute kicked up after officials announced they were going to make more than the cursory post-qualifying check. Chief inspector Bill Gazaway announced the cars would be torn down almost completely — checking behind welded-in panels and inside the tubes of roll bars.

Foyt and Ellington were livid. Waltrip's crew chief Mario Rossi was equally angry. But Marcis' chief mechanic, Harry Hyde, invited inspectors to "cut the car in half if they want to."

NASCAR President Bill

France Jr. said the action was unprecedented and harsh. But he said he hoped it would serve as a deterrent to the use of any similar illegal equipment in the future.

France said he had no indication if Foyt, Waltrip or Marcis would attempt to qualify again. France said all three would be permitted to make new qualification attempts if they wish.

Gazaway said the Chevrolets of Foyt and Waltrip had trick attachments in the fuel systems capable of adding nitrous oxide to make the car go much faster.

Marcis' car, he said, had a movable flap inside the radiator that when lowered would channel air more aerodynamically away from the nose of the car.

One other car — that of Bruce Hill — was also disqualified for using a fuel additive. He had qualified well down in the field, however.

The usual procedure, Gazaway explained, is to present a car for inspection within 30 minutes of a qualifying run.

However, a long harangue developed between the inspectors and crew chiefs over what would be inspected. Finally, about two hours after all qualifying ended, Waltrip's green-and-white Chevrolet was wheeled behind the steel doors of the inspection shed.

It was later pushed into another restricted area and covered with a tarp. No one is allowed near it after that.

Foyt's Chevrolet was then pushed in for a checking over that lasted less than half as long.

After his car went inside, Foyt quietly followed and remained there until shortly before officials told newsmen, "There will be an announcement shortly."

Two hours after that, after Marcis' and Stott's cars were checked, the announcement came.

Gazaway said a deputy sheriff was guarding the new second place car, driven by Terry Ryan, until an inspection Monday morning.

'Cyclists claim win at Parker

PARKER, Ariz. (AP) — Larry Roesler, 18, of Bloomington, Calif., and A.C. Bakken, 23, of Anaheim, Calif., rode a Husqvarna 360cc motorcycle to victory in SCORE's Parker 400 Off-road Race, which ended early Sunday when a field of 335 vehicles was trimmed to 159 survivors by a grueling desert course.

Roesler and Bakken covered the 344 miles of rugged sand and boulders in 7 hours, 14 minutes. Motorcycles and four-wheeled vehicles left the starting line Saturday morning for two 105 mile loops in Arizona and a 134-mile loop across the Colorado River in California, which were run injury-free.

Bill Silverthorn, Lemon Grove, Calif., gunned the first four-wheel vehicle through the course, with an elapsed time of 7 hours, 40 minutes in a single-seat Chenoweth Wedge.

Among the popular victors was Darold MacDannald, 61, of Keyes, Calif., finishing in 10 hours, 44 minutes with a 1969 Ford pickup in the production two-wheel-drive utility vehicle category. MacDannald, an off-road racing veteran, has one leg.

Fifty-nine-year-old Orris Johnson, a retired Los Angeles policeman now from Lynwood, Calif., teamed with son Jerry of Cerritos, Calif., to show the younger racers around the course. They captured the class for two-seat four-wheeled vehicles displacing under 1,200cc in 9 hours, 15 minutes.

Jim Tortorelli, San Diego, and his co-driver nephew, Don Tortorelli of Garden Grove, Calif., won the stock Volkswagen sedan class, finishing in time of 7 hours, 46 minutes over a shorter course.

Sittler enjoyed busy night

TORONTO (AP) — Darryl Sittler had every reason to be disappointed Sunday night. After scoring a National Hockey League-record 10 points the night before, he slumped to just one assist against the Minnesota North Stars.

In just one game, the Toronto Maple Leafs center had done a week's work for most other NHL players: scoring a record-tying six goals and getting assists on four others for 10 points in an 11-4 romp over the Boston Bruins Saturday night.

The performance topped the previous record of eight points in a game, held Maurice Richard and Bert Olmstead, who accomplished those marks for the Montreal Canadiens in 1944 and 1954, respectively. He tied the league record of six goals in a game, set by Syd Howe of Detroit in 1944 and matched by Red Berenson of St. Louis in 1968.

"It was just one of those nights; I couldn't do anything wrong. It seemed every time I touched the puck, something happened," said a jubilant Sittler, who took 10 shots on Boston goaltender Dave Reece.

It seems unlikely, but the 25-year-old pivot said he didn't know he was approaching a record until the information blinked across the message board in Maple Leaf Gardens. The crowd, which included his parents, roared its appreciation after Sittler had tallied his eighth point of the night.

"That really felt great, but I think I was just trying to play my game," he said.

But it couldn't possibly have been a normal Sittler game. His sixth goal, for example, bounded into the net off the leg of a defending player.

"It's like his shots were directed by radar," marvelled Bruins center Andre Savard. "He even scored one from behind the net. How often does something like that happen?"

"I was trying to pass it to Errol Thompson in the slot," said Sittler, "and it just hit a leg and went in."

Sittler scored three times, twice in each of the last two periods, with the last two coming within a two-minute span.

BIRTHDAY CAKE

Alisa Stephens, 4, left, whips up eggs for a 10th anniversary cake at First Christian Church Pre-School in Pomona which will be shared by 40 youngsters Wednesday. Lending Alisa their moral support are Anke Leighty, second from left, Andrew Jaurequi and Michele Wiley, right. Each of these youngsters is 3. Valentine decorations will be used for the party.

Anniversary celebrated by youngsters

Forty of the 70 children enrolled at First Christian Church Pre-School in Pomona will celebrate the school's 10th birthday anniversary Wednesday.

To mark the occasion, the boys and girls in the 3-year-old classes are baking the cakes. Those in the 4- and 5-year-old classes will do the Valentine decorating for the party.

In observance of the anniversary, parents of the pre-school children recently repainted the playground equipment.

Wanda Stafford has directed the school since it opened. Teachers on the staff are Marjorie Newman, Phyllis vonNagy, Janet Shively and Rosemarie Rieger.

The school, at 1751 N. Park Ave. serves children from 2½ to 5. Classes are held each week 2½ to 5. Classes are held each week 2½ to 5. Classes are held each week 2½ to 5.

The purpose of the school, according to Mrs. Stafford, is to provide a program geared to meet the mental, physical, intellectual and emotional growth needs of each individual child.

The school is non-profit. Minimum dues are paid monthly. Enrollment information may be obtained by calling 622-1144.

Car gas fumes cause of fire

Fumes from gas leaking from a car were ignited by a water heater pilot light causing $3,200 loss Sunday in William Humphrey's garage at 1439 Lassiter St., Walnut.

County firemen said the loss estimate to the garage was $1,500 with an additional $600 to contents, plus $800 damage to one automobile and $300 to the second where the fire originated.

He came to Pitzer College from the State University of New York at Albany where he was associate professor of the School of Criminal Justice.

18-member committee studies plan

New tests for city schools?

An 18-member committee will meet Tuesday at 3:30 p.m. at Pomona Public Library to develop a plan for measuring the effectiveness of the educational program in Pomona's public schools.

"There is a feeling that the community and the staff depend too heavily on one piece of data in making this determination, namely state test data," said Kenneth Cooper, director of pupil personnel services, under whose guidance the committee was formed.

"We believe that it is imperative that community members representing a wide variety of backgrounds and experiences become integrally involved in the process of designing a meaningful way to determine what our students are learning," said Cooper.

"That is the first step towards improving the educational process."

Half the committee members come from the community and half from the district staff.

Community representatives are Gloria Mendeville, Martha Vejar, Willie White, Frances Livingston, Teresa Alcalá, Nancy Lopez, Frieda Patterson, Eddi Marie Patterson and Richard Alvarez.

Staff members are Doug MacKenzie, chairman of the mentally gifted minor program; Steven Goldstone, principal of Lorbeer Junior High School; Virginia Sullivan, teacher at Golden Springs Elementary School; Mildred Taylor, teacher at Fremont Junior High School; Ellen Lepp, Ganesha High School counselor; Jo Reedy, Simons Junior High School counselor; Janet Snyder, teacher at Golden Springs; Jack Wooton, Ganesha dean of instruction; and Sarah Ross, teacher at Lorbeer.

Two Chinoans hurt in auto accident

Two members of a Chino family were injured Sunday night by a car whose driver, with his passengers, ran from the scene of the collision in Pomona, police reported.

The accident was at Garey Avenue north of Olive Street where Gerald Burnham, 38, said the driver of a heavy sedan made an abrupt turn in front of his small car. After the collision the other driver, and several passengers, fled on foot, leaving the car.

Injured in the accident was Judy

Ann Burnham, 25, who had a cut forehead, and 8-year-old Nicole Burnham, who had a hand injury. Both were treated and released at Pomona Valley Community Hospital. Two other Burnham children did not require medical attention.

Police later traced the car to its former owner in West Covina and were told he sold the vehicle in November at a car auction. They were attempting to learn the identity of the new owner.

San Jose boy still in critical condition

A 10-year-old San Jose boy, severely injured in a dramatic crash that killed four persons in Azusa Saturday afternoon, was reported still in critical condition at Glendora Community Hospital this morning.

He is Angelo Flores, a passenger in the car driven by Joe Salazar, 21, of San Jose, which ran off 210 Freeway, crashed through the railing of the transition road bridge, and dropped 60 feet to the street below, where it landed on top of another car southbound on Azusa Avenue.

Salazar and three passengers died in the accident. The passengers were Evangelina Salazar, 21; Manuel Montanez, 10, and a 10-year-old girl identified so far only as "Mary," all of San Jose.

'Black Cultural Fair' scheduled in Pomona

The Pomona Valley National Association for the Advancement of Colored People will sponsor a "Black Cultural Fair" on Sunday at the Palomares Junior High School in Pomona to showcase the black American's role and contributions to American progress and development.

The event will be held from 1 to 5 p.m. The Afro-American History Month theme of "America for All Americans" will be the basis of films, displays, dramatic presentations, music, exhibits and reading materials.

The event is designed to be an educational and cultural experience for both young people and adults, and will utilize a cross section of the community in its presentations.

Students from North San Antonio Elementary School in Pomona will be featured in special skits and presentations, drawing upon both the poetry and history of black people in America. They will be directed by Sam Tharpe, assistant principal at North San Antonio.

James Benson, professional jazz musician and director of music at Palomares Junior High School in Pomona, will coordinate all major and background music.

Samella Lewis, artist, art historian and professor at Claremont's Scripps College, will set up an exhibit of the works of Elizabeth Catlett, William H. Johnson, Raymond Saunders, John Outterbridge, Bernie Casey and herself. She will also show two short films on Casey and Outterbridge.

Bert Hammond, a Cal Poly professor, will show slides on Africa. Community children, under the direction of Willie White and Mae Tate, will present "Black Profiles," a showcase of black innovations.

Mrs. Jo Cunningham, coordinator of minority history and culture for Pomona Unified School District, will sponsor a display of educational materials for children.

A "Black Careers" section will deal with local black representatives in such areas as education, military science, dentistry, pharmaceutical science, government administration, retail sales and management, community youth work, writing, banking, medicine, library science, nursing, programming and athletics.

The Black Theater Ensemble of Garey High School in Pomona, under the direction of Mrs. Aura Kruger and Mrs. Claudia Grigsby, will give a dramatic presentation tracing blacks in America from slavery to the 1970s.

Lawrence Harris of La Verne, a minister and artist, will display several pieces in his "Black Heritage" series. George Hardgrove, Pomona artist, will also exhibit several of his works.

Community leaders and government officials are expected to take part in the activity which is open to the general public.

The event is coordinated by Mrs. Tate, NAACP secretary, and Mrs. Shirley Jennings, NAACP second vice president.

Valley refugee problems topic of discussion

The continuing problems facing the refugees from Southeast Asia who have settled in the valley will be discussed at a panel on Wednesday.

The Tri-City Mental Health Authority will host the panel discussion from 10 a.m. to noon in the Pomona City Hall Boards and Commission Room.

Speakers will represent many of the agencies that have assisted in the settlement of the refugees, according to Randy Corliss, program coordinator.

To be represented are the Pomona Red Cross, Pomona District Health Office, Los Angeles County Department of Public Social Services, City of Pomona community relations representatives, Pomona School District, valley church representatives and the Southeast Asian Task Force.

Volunteers who have been involved in assisting the newcomers and all interested persons are invited to participate, Corliss said.

The purpose of the meeting is to pool information about resources for the refugees and to discuss problems which have arisen and solutions used to date.

Corliss said the workshop should help agencies better understand problems of language barriers, unemployment and need for sponsors. Specific areas which need to be better explored will be presented with the goal of seeking cooperative solutions, he added.

Additional information may be obtained by calling Corliss at 623-6131.

Alta Dena Dairy will be honored

Alta Dena Dairy of City of Industry will be honored Tuesday evening by the Southern California Dental Foundation for the dairy's continuing program in promoting good dental hygiene.

At a dinner at the Huntington Sheraton Hotel, Pasadena, Dr. Lawrence Kaplan, president of the dental foundation, will give a special plaque to Harold J.J. Stueve and Paul Virgin, Alta Dena executives, honoring the San Gabriel Valley-area dairy for its work with dentists on continuing education.

Kaplan also singled out the recent help of Alta Dena during National Children's Dental Week.

Apartment Assoc. hosts speaker

Charles Pierce, executive director of the Orange County Apartment Association, will be speaker at the Apartment Association, Mt. Baldy Area meeting Wednesday in Claremont.

The program, starting at 7:30 p.m. will be held at the Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association building, 393 W. Foothill Blvd.

The speaker will discuss legislative and economic areas which concern rental owners.

Vic Tessier, attorney, will conduct his regular "problem clinic." The public is invited to attend.

Progress Bulletin Opinion

Pomona, California ■ Monday, February 9, 1976

Students are shortchanged

More Americans are going to school for more years than ever before, but they seem to be learning less and less.

One in every five adult Americans is "functionally illiterate" and unable to cope with the basic demands of life, according to the preliminary report of a five-year national survey. And the illiteracy rate among young people, aged 18 to 29, is worse than that of those aged 30 to 39.

Millions of people don't understand simple things like how rent works when they get out of high school, says Dr. Norvell Nortchutt of the University of Texas, who headed the team conducting the survey. "They lack the skills and knowledge to achieve even moderate success in life."

At the same time, there has been a decade-long drop in the scores achieved by college-bound high school seniors in such widely used tests as the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and the American College Testing Program (ACT).

Up until the mid-1960s, the trend for all testing programs was a steady increase in all subject areas. Then a decline began which has steepened in recent years and has brought the level of SAT scores below that of the 1940s.

This has educators puzzled, and many of them are blaming the tests themselves, claiming they do not accurately measure true abilities. A different explanation, however, is suggested by another team of researchers.

Decreasing enrollment in traditional academic courses is the most likely cause of the declining achievement level of American high school students, say David E. Wiley, associate professor of education and the behavioral sciences at the University of Chicago, and Annegret Harnischfeger, a former research associate at the same university.

High school students are taking fewer "basic" courses like English and mathematics, and fewer college preparatory courses like algebra, first-year foreign languages, chemistry and physics, they say.

Another finding of concern to parents and educators is a drop in enrollment in vocational training, such as business and home economics courses. This development, together with the general enrollment decline in academic courses, "has resulted in extreme drops in total secondary school course taking."

The researchers also speculate that students may be receiving less overall instruction time because of shortened school days, or increases in study hall periods as a substitute for homework.

Wiley and Harnischfeger examined a number of other possible factors, such as problems associated with racial desegregation, the increased mobility of families, the rise in single-parent families, the effects of television watching, school crowding, teacher strikes, higher student suspension rates and a larger percentage of "drop-out prone" students staying in school and taking the tests.

They found nothing that could be linked as directly to the decline in achievement, negatively or positively, as the fact that students simply are not being given the basic education the schools are supposed to provide.

There would seem to be a more than casual connection between this report and the one on illiteracy.

In our desire to produce happy, socially adjusted individuals from whom little in hard academic study is demanded, we seem to be creating a generation of educationally shortchanged incompetents from whom little can be expected.

Thoughts

Lo! I tell you a mystery. We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, and the dead will be raised imperishable, and we shall be changed. — I Cor. 15:51, 52.

Equal pay for equal work

Dear Editor:

Judging by a number of recent letters published in various newspapers, and by certain editorial comment, it appears that the governor's proposed flat $65 per month across the board state employee salary increase may not be fully understood by some persons.

We fully appreciate the views of those who may disagree with our position of opposition to the plan, but we think it is important that Californians be made aware of the relevant facts before passing judgment on a matter of this consequence.

The governor's statement that everyone (all state employees), from judges to janitors, should receive equal dollar pay increases because it's the lower paid employee who suffers the most from inflation, we believe to be misleading. Because that statement implies that all state employees have in the past received equal percentage salary increases, and, therefore, those in the higher salary brackets always receive a substantially larger dollar amount.

California state employees are paid wages, at least theoretically, comparable to those paid workers in the private and other public sectors. Their salary levels are influenced by wage trends established in these other sectors, and are adjusted annually on the basis of comparison studies developed on an individual job classification basis.

The State Personnel Board is charged with the responsibility of collecting and analyzing salary data each year. It subsequently recommends a wide range of percentage salary increases be granted specific classes of employees, in order to maintain parity pay with their counterparts in the private and other public sectors. As an example, salary increases granted state employees this year ranged from zero to 10 per cent. This variance was caused by similar job classification salary level changes that occurred in other employment markets.

A flat dollar salary increase plan as proposed by the governor is inconsistent with and runs contrary to the prevailing wage concept. It would mean that certain state employees working in lower paid job classifications would be paid more than their counterparts in private industry, while others holding more responsible positions would be paid less. We think it to be a reasonable position to ask only that state employees receive equal pay for equal work; that they be paid no more, but no less for their talents, skills and efforts than their counterparts working elsewhere.

The governor's plan does not provide this. — Frank Bolton, Pomona California Correctional Officers Association

Muckrakers past and present

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Muckrakers had their day in the sun as Richard Nixon and his Watergate crew committed first the blunders and then the crimes that produced the greatest political scandal in American history.

But the day of the muckraker is passing. Already, editors are putting on their hairshirts, and the watchdogs of government slowly are being replaced by lapdogs.

In the public mind, muckrakers often get mixed up with their illegitimate cousins — the purveyors of gossip that is only titillating, the mongers of scandals that lack redeeming social content.

Perhaps a mixed parentage explains the confusion. Muckrakers descend in part from the Utopian visionaries and idealistic reformers of the 19th century but also in part from those marvelous dregs of journalism, the editors of political party organs. They poured out such slop as that Thomas Jefferson bedded down with a beautiful slave, that Andrew Jackson's wife was a bigamist, that Grover Cleveland had perpetrated bastards.

So that is that muckraking has come to have about it a mixed aroma compounded of idealism and disreputability. And, in truth, our gazing at the stars is only intermittent, done between raking behind the barn.

Muckraking, like depressions and above-the-knee hemlines, is a creature of cycles. The youngsters who today flock to college classes on investigative reporting should understand one thing clearly: those who pursue muckraking for a lifetime are destined to spend part of their span as anachronisms, part as unsung precursors and only a fraction as the temporary lions of the hour.

Muckraking bloomed fabulously in the first decade of this century. With all the impact of fresh discovery, it fell upon the anti-social proclivities of Congress, Wall Street, city government, insurance companies, big oil, banks, the police, the meat packers. Many of its exposes were carried in a new medium, the inexpensive weekly magazine, directed at a mass, middle-class audience.

But people at length become bored even with calamities and particularly with degeneration. By 1910, muckraking had begun to fade out of fashion.

It didn't return in force until the hard times of the 1930s, when journalists impressed upon the public consciousness the stark plight of factory workers, sharecroppers, miners, migrant workers, small farmers, the unemployed, the homeless.

But the wartime rallying around the flag in the 1940s followed by the postwar boom — with the attendant journalistic soft soap — eclipsed muckraking for another two decades until the rediscovery of poverty, the civil rights movement, the Vietnam War and the reemergence of Richard Nixon brought it back.

That muckraking fades away is not the consequential thing; what popular enthusiasm does not? The significant thing is that it returns. What has made muckraking more than a mere striving for individual recognition, or a competition for circulation and profits, or a venting of political or ideological partisanship, are three abiding qualities: the paradoxical optimism of its spirit, the consistent loftiness of its aims and the honesty of its methods.

Muckrakers, from Ida Tarbell to Ralph Nader, have typically believed in the decency of the average person once the foot is off his neck; in the proper response of society if it knows the truth; in the workability, indeed the genius of the American political and economic system so long as its malefactors and malfunctions are regularly exposed.

Its central aim has always been simple: to free the humble and the helpless from the exploitations of the greedy, the corrupt and the unthinking. Its enemy is always secrecy and unaccountability. At the turn of the century, this meant corporations primarily; they are still high on the list. But big government, big labor, the military, the organized professions, have joined them as favorite suspects.

The proposed cure is always the same: to open the books, to let in the light of public disclosure. Muckraking believes that evolution, not revolution, is the path for America.

Muckrakers have sought to influence readers whom they regarded as honest, intelligent and persuadable. Lincoln Steffens, the eminent muckraker of the Teddy Roosevelt era, offered a formula:

"Clear your mind of all prepossessions, then go to the enemies and the friends of your subject. Take all that they give you of charges, denials and boasting; see the man himself; listen sympathetically to his own story; and, to reduce to consistency the jumble of contradictions thus obtained, follow his career from birth through all its scenes, past all the eyewitnesses and documents to the probable truth."

The aim and the method of the muckraker are represented by the complacent on the right, who are ever reluctant to wallow in our cesspools; and scorned by the despairing on the left, who either foresee unavoidable apocalypse or advocate the destruction of the American system and its replacement from the ground up.

Is it then to be the blindfold, or the sword, or the pen? Perhaps some comfort can be drawn from the words of Senator George Norris, spoken at the grave of the great journalist, Paul Y. Anderson, who, not knowing he was an anachronism, exposed Teapot Dome and the plunder of our natural resources in the 1920s:

"The pen he wielded for so many years in behalf of humanity, in behalf of justice, was more mighty than the sword of the most illustrious warrior who ever fought upon the field of battle."

Our man in Washington

Ford gets high marks

By TERRY WADE
PB Washington Writer

WASHINGTON — The popular public image of President Ford is not complimentary. We all saw him fall on the ski slopes, stumble down the airplane ramp and we've all heard him stumble over words during important speeches.

The question is — do we measure a man's intelligence and worth by his dexterity or eloquence.

Ford is not a John Kennedy when he reaches the podium. He may or may not be nimble, still most All-American football players have some coordination.

The truth of the matter Ford's intellect should be the least of the American public's worries when it goes to the polls.

The President graduated from Yale law school in the top one-third of his class.

He has shown an amazing grasp of the complex issues of government during his long career, according to colleagues.

Despite the image painted of the President by cartoonists and writers Mr. Ford is competent in his job.

At the recent presidential press briefings on the budget Ford got high marks for knowing the details of the budget and seldom relied on the department heads surrounding him for answers to questions reporters asked.

Several "old heads" of the press corps felt his performance was better than any president they had observed.

Last month chairmen of eight western state republican organizations visited the White House and talked with Mr. Ford for an hour-and-a-half.

Without exception they were surprised at Ford's comprehension of their problems. The Hawaiian chairmen related Ford was aware of two of his state's major government problems.

It might not be surprising to find Republicans complimenting a Republican President, but even those who openly supported Ronald Reagan said the same things.

Another thing they had in common was this thought: "If President Ford can project the same image to the public that he does in private sessions he will be hard to beat." One wonders can he do it?

Doc Peirsol Just in jest

This is the year to count our blessings and give proper thanks for the wonders our nation's 200 glorious years have wrought. . . . So let's start with a hip, hip, hooray for the amazing fact that in this land of the free and home of the brave, according to one advertisement, any citizen, regardless of race, color, or previous condition of servitude, can lose 25 pounds or more without missing a single meal.

And if that seems a bit too strenuous, another advertisement promises that even as much as 30 pounds can be shed without even giving up snacks or desserts. —But maybe overweight isn't your problem. Maybe what you lack is love or money. Well, cease worrying! According to still another ad, American ingenuity has found a way to solve those problems too. The answer is a low priced bracelet that has the power to draw money and love the wearer's way. —And if your health isn't all you'd like it to be, here again 200 years of American know-how have perfected a "Superman Diet" guaranteed to give you extra energy or your money back.

Ralph de Toledano

Newsman not above the law

WASHINGTON — Some years ago this writer had the privilege of being a member of a Twentieth Century Fund task force on freedom of the press and government power. Others on the task force included a U.S. Court of Appeals judge, the chief justice of a state supreme court and some journalistic luminaries.

Among the newsmen was a reporter who had met secretly with several fugitives from justice, sought by law enforcement agencies, but had not, as every citizen is duty-bound to do, reported on the whereabouts of these criminals to local police officials or to the FBI.

It was the view of my journalistic colleagues that it is improper for a newspaperman to cooperate with law enforcement authorities — that by virtue of the 1st Amendment, journalists are a breed apart who do not have to abide by the rules which apply to ordinary mortals.

That was a few years ago. Now the Congress and the media are in full chase after newspapermen who have cooperated with the CIA or FBI. One reporter who, in his coverage of the United Nations, supplied information to the FBI has been singled out — and I would not be surprised if his journalistic days are numbered.

Now it should be noted that, as congressional investigations have shown, the Soviet Union and other Communist countries have liberally seeded the U.N. with their espionage agents.

The U.N. gives them diplomatic immunity and a cover for their covert activities in the United States. But once those activities have been discovered by the FBI it is possible to have them removed, though not punished.

The newspaperman in question — and I do not mention his name because it will only add to his troubles — did what any self-respecting citizen would have done. And he is not alone.

The late Frederick Woltman of the Scripps-Howard newspapers worked closely and effectively with the FBI in exposing the depredations of Soviet agents in this country. Woltman won two Pulitzer Prizes, and he was one of the most responsible and dedicated newsmen I have ever known.

There were others, in my New York newspaper days, who did as Fred did, and they deserve the respect and admiration of the country.

Perhaps I am inviting myself to a congressional hot seat by confessing that in the past when the FBI called me and asked for information about aspects of Communist subversion, I gave it. There were other times when I volunteered information which I thought was important.

For those who think this is shameful — who believe that a reporter who places at the disposal of his government information that involves the national security is some kind of fink — I might add that had I supplied a local police chief with information about an impending bank robbery, I would have received plaudits and a raise.

But when, in 1942, a good friend was murdered on a New York street by one of Stalin's killers, there were those who felt that my efforts to help the police in tracking down the assassin were unprofessional.

Let me add that there were others who realized that by my efforts I was putting my own life in jeopardy, but that was in another time. Today, I would have to count my supporters on the fingers of one hand.

A newspaperman must protect his sources if he wants to stay in business — and if this be treason, make the most of it. But if he comes upon information of crime — of whatever nature — he is abdicating his duties as a citizen if he does not pass it on to the appropriate law enforcement agency, whether it be the local police or the FBI.

There is nothing in the journalistic code of ethics — such as it is — which says that newspapermen have a right to cover up for crime or subversion and espionage. There is nothing in the Constitution which says that newspapermen are above the law.

Unable to obtain Medi-Cal insurance

I am writing on behalf of my parents who have tried unsuccessfully on two occasions to obtain Medi-Cal insurance for my mother.

They maintain life on a fixed income due to the fact that my mother is a diabetic and a double amputee. My mother is unable to work, not only for health reasons, but for the obvious reason of caring for my father.

They have applied for health insurances via other avenues but either they simply couldn't afford the exorbitant premium or the coverage allowed them was not adequate, even for a healthy person.

Upon inquiries we've made, most people are of the opinion that my mother surely qualifies for Medi-Cal.

A Pomona social worker told my father she knew of no reason why my mother shouldn't qualify.

For some reason San Bernardino County officials located in Ontario seem to feel that my mother does not qualify in their county.

It is my understanding that Medi-Cal is a state insurance and I would like to know how she can qualify in one county and not another. — G. T. Chino

We learned that on Aug. 27, 1975, your mother was "informally denied" eligibility for the Medi-Cal program during an interview with one of the staff in the Ontario office of the San Bernardino County Department of Public Social Services.

An informal denial means that on the surface it appeared that assets or value of property owned was in excess of that allowed by state regulations.

No formal application had been made by your mother, according to Paul Morsen, community relations coordinator of the county's Human Resources Agency.

He suggests that she re-apply at the Ontario office, this time insisting on a formal application.

If her application is formally denied, a letter will outline exactly in what respects eligibility could not be established.

If she then wishes to pursue the matter further, she may request a hearing before an impartial referee who may overturn a decision of the Department of Public Social Services.

We are Claremont artists who have been sending slides of certain of our works to greeting card companies, hoping to sell our designs.

We sent a group of slides, registered, to the George Caspari Co. in New York, along with a letter, on Sept. 26, 1975.

We never heard from the company in spite of letters inquiring about our slides. We did receive a note from the post office saying they were indeed delivered.

We are very concerned about the slides, as we have no other copies and the slides were done at considerable expense.

Is there any way you can help us recover them? — R. M. and K. M., Claremont.

A week after we wrote to the George Caspari Co., you got your slides back, although we received no answer whatsoever from the firm.

You said a letter apologizing for the delay accompanied the slides.

BERNICE BEDE OSOL
For Tuesday, Feb. 10, 1976

ARIES (March 21-April 19) This could be an exciting day especially if you're working on a large, new project. Your enthusiasm will get others involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Your prospects look very promising today. If there's something long due to you from a friend, perhaps you can collect — with a little interest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're luckier today for yourself than you are for others. Concentrate on advancing your self-interests.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Try to do something today where you help someone you're fond of. Be his active booster.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) A person is fortunate when he has good friends. You are doubly blessed today. You have two pals you can really count on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Though you have to work a bit longer than usual today, do things that will please the boss. He'll give you credit and, perhaps, a bonus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) If your outlook is broad, positive and humorous, you'll be surprised at the exceptional day you'll have. Your good spirits will be infectious.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A major change that could affect your lifestyle is ready to surface today, provided you've thought it through carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A good day for you to sit down at the bargaining table. You'll be sharp enough to get a good deal, yet you'll be scrupulously fair.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Conditions affecting your work or career are still in a very profitable cycle. Don't overlook anything.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You make a good impression today. Don't be amazed if someone who has been uncommunicative suddenly has a lot to talk over.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You can bring things to a happy conclusion today. If you have any problems hanging, press a little harder to resolve them.

Your Birthday, Feb. 10, 1976

The urge to travel this year will be stronger than usual because you'll be among friends who love to go. You might even find a fun place that's a home away from home.

Ann Landers

She knows what she's doing

Dear Ann Landers: I know you don't like it when people ask you to do their dirty work, but I hope and pray you will make an exception and print my letter.

Dear Neighbor: Most people undress before going to bed, but you, my dear, have a habit of undressing when you come home from work. My husband gets home from work about the same time you do. I'm asking a favor. Will you please pull your shades down when you undress directly in front of your bedroom window with all the lights on?

My husband has lost interest in Walter Cronkite since he got his first glimpse of you three months ago. I'm writing you have no idea you are being observed. I know you to be a very decent woman. I can't bring myself to look you in the face and tell you this, so I am writing to Ann Landers. Please, for my sake as well as yours, will you kindly pull down your shades? Thank you. — Right Next Door

Dear N. D.: Here's your letter, but don't expect it to change anything. That "very decent" woman knows (a) that she is undressing in front of the window (b) that her lights are on and (c) that her shades are up.

Some people get their jollies by looking, others by performing. Your letter describes one of each.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a car salesman who works 20 miles from home for a large dealer. Please don't tell me to talk to my clergyman because he is part of the problem.

My wife became involved with church work several months ago. The minister thought she was wonderful and began to pay her some heavy compliments. It went to her head and the next thing I knew, she was doing "projects" with him at our home while I was at work. Several neighbors made "joking" remarks about his car being in front of our house three afternoons a week.

I didn't think anything of it until my father-in-law dropped in on my wife one day. The door happened to be open and he caught them in the act. He was so mad he told everyone in town.

We have three school-age children and I don't know what to do. Can you help me? — Heartsick Husband

Dear Husband: You need to talk to someone who knows more than what you've told me in your letter. Such as: Is the affair still going on? Has your wife asked for forgiveness? How old are the children? How do the minister's parishioners feel about this? Is he going to remain in town?

A competent counselor will lead you out of the darkness and into the light.

Dear Ann: I got out of bed at 1:00 a.m. to write this letter. I know I won't sleep until I tell off "Super Secretary" who in real life is "Super Troublemaker."

I also work for a "great guy" but he has a wife and family which means he's "Off Limits." His wife can phone him 25 times a day. I couldn't care less. If it bothers him, HE can tell her. I don't give a fig how often she comes to the office. She can set up housekeeping in the reception room if she wants to.

A "Super Secretary" doesn't undermine the boss's wife in small ways that can eventually destroy a marriage. — Seen 'Em At Work

Dear Seen 'Em: Thanks for a good letter. If anyone out there feels uncomfortable — she's talking to YOU.

Drugs? How much is too much? Is pot O.K.? Is L.S.D. too much? If you're on dope or considering it, get Ann Landers' new booklet, "Straight Dope on Drugs." For each booklet ordered, send a dollar bill plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope (26 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

The Truth in Borrowing Act

Under the pressures of Ralph Nadir, the Security and Exchange Commission, and the Daughters of the American Revolution, the government knuckled under some time ago to provide the citizens with what is known as the Federal Truth in Lending Act.

I know what the lending act is — how do you think I've got along this far? I do not know what federal truth is. Is that like Watergate?

To put it bluntly (I hope this doesn't land me in jail) the Truth in Lending Act makes those people and institutions with a lot of money, tell us impoverished peasants just how much interest they are soaking — er, charging us. Before what are called "disclosures" — which has a slightly secretive connotation — banks, savings and loan groups, loan sharks (E-Z Finance) and other purse-string holders, lent us money and charged frightening interest rates which were disguised in lengthy, legal-terminology contracts that only a

Supreme Court justice could wade through.

Now, however, the banks and credit agencies are required by law to make it all clear to us, thus: "At its option the bank may declare all or any portion of your outstanding balance to be immediately due and payable without prior notice if you fail to perform any of the terms of the agreement or if any joint applicant of your card or account die, become insolvent, commit an act of bankruptcy, or fail to pay when due, writs of attachment, execution, garnishment, zzzzzzz."

Now that we all understand the Federal Truth in Lending Act, it is time we made equally lucid the Federal Truth in Borrowing Act, under which the average citizen does his best to con banks and loan companies into lending him a few hundred bucks for a short period (Christmas shopping, vacation, etc.) always maintaining the illusion that the loan institutions are not getting fat on the interest on the loan.

Dr. Lamb

He awakens with quick beat

DEAR DR. LAMB — My husband wakes from a sound sleep with his heart beating rapid and hard, and sometimes with shortness of breath. His hands break out in a cold sweat and sometimes his leg muscles jerk. These spells last from five to 10 minutes. There is slight discomfort in the upper abdomen.

He doesn't drink coffee, alcoholic beverages or smoke. He is 50 and not overweight. His blood pressure has always been a little on the low side and his occupation involves plenty of physical exercise.

Sixteen years ago he had similar symptoms and was found to have a duodenal ulcer. With antacids and diet he was pronounced cured. When these spells started this time the doctor said it was nerves and gave him Valium. It helped. This year a different doctor also prescribed Valium. My husband says he feels relaxed when he goes to bed and it seems hard to believe that nerves could be the cause of these symptoms while he is sleeping. Do you agree?

Could these be symptoms of a ruptured esophagus, since they occur only at night while he is lying down? The next day, he feels fine and does a day's work. We would like your opinion.

DEAR READER — Disturbance

of sleep is sometimes a symptom of various emotional problems, including anxiety and depression. However, the absence of symptoms at all other times does make one wonder.

The rapid forceful heartbeat sounds like one of the paroxysmal rapid heart actions that occur in attacks. They are sometimes related to anxiety or nervousness but may not be. Such attacks can be precipitated by digestive disturbances.

Your husband does not have a ruptured esophagus but he may well have a hiatal hernia, which may be (what) you mean. This is a hernia (rupture) of part of the stomach through an enlarged hole in the diaphragm. It is often associated with leakage of the acid contents of the stomach into the lower esophagus when one is lying down. This can cause some "burning in the pit of the stomach."

The irritation of the lower esophagus can then trigger an attack of rapid heart action or even extra beats (skipped beats of the heart. Antacids are part of the treatment of such a condition.

Breaking out in a cold sweat could be a reaction to an attack of rapid heart action but it can also be a manifestation of nervousness as can the muscle jerks. There is naturally some anxiety though in anyone who wakes up with reason to think something is not right with the way the heart is functioning. When your heart is beating rapidly and forcefully, it does get your attention regardless of the cause.

Your doctor might need to take X rays of the stomach for the particular purpose of looking for a hiatal hernia.

Oswald: "Some years ago I made headlines by saying the perfect partner would be right 75 per cent of the time."

Jim: "I guess you were a trifle severe, but it is a certainty that the darndest things happen in top-flight competition."

Oswald: "The final match to determine the American team for the 1976 world championship produced a lot of great bridge and a lot of mistakes. At the first table South was very unhappy with his three-notrump contract. The defense starting with four heart tricks and South had to chuck two spades from dummy. However, the diamond finesse was won and he came home with his poor contract only to find that he had lost two international match points."

Jim: "At the other table North wound up with the really silly contract of four spades. Hearts were opened and continued and he decided to ruff the third lead. He entered dummy with the ace of clubs, took a trump finesse, played his ace and king and was home when the suit broke. Finally, he got to dummy with the fourth club and took a diamond finesse to score an overtrick."

Ask the Jacobys

A New Hampshire reader wants to know if it was a very bad bid when she raised her partner's opening spade bid to four with:

♠ K 9 x x x ♥ x x ♦ Q x x x x ♣ x x

The answer is that it was a very good bid. Partner may not make four spades, but he isn't going to be hurt. And if he can't make it, the opponents probably have a game or even a slam. Incidentally, this is almost a book response. Good distribution and few high cards.

The 10 bodies in best shape

Name the 10 citizens in this country whose bodies are in the best physical shape. Pollsters asked 3,000 editors to do that. Possibly, most of the editors queried were at least 40 years old, because eight of their top 10 candidates indeed were 40 or older. Mary Tyler Moore, who recently turned 40, got more votes than anybody else. Next came Katharine Hepburn, 66. Fred Astaire, 76, pulled in third. And down the line in order were Arthur Ashe, 32; Johnny Carson, 50; Lena Horne, 58; John Lindsay, 54; Margot Fonteyne, 56; Henry Fonda, 71; and Diana Ross, 30.

VENEREAL DISEASE

An insect called a walking stick, or stick insect, has a body that is easily mistaken for a twig.

The common walking stick's body and legs are long and slender. Unlike most insects, it has no wings. Walking sticks are greedy leaf-eaters. They live in trees and shrubs and look so much like the twigs on which they rest that they escape the notice of all but the keenest-eyed predators. If this defense fails, a walking stick can eject a foul-smelling liquid that often discourages its enemies.

Walking sticks do not move about much during the day. They remain perfectly still for hours at a time. At night they creep slowly along on their awkward legs in search of food.

If a walking stick loses one of its legs, it can grow a new one.

The female walking stick drops her eggs at random as she walks along. Some will hatch the following spring. Young walking sticks are green, but the adults are usually brown in color.

A pocket radio, camera, World Almanac globe or other fine prize will be awarded to the first youngster sending in a question used here. Send your question and your age to Johnny Wonder, (c/o this newspaper), Box 1335 (DA), Santa Cruz, CA 95061.

Albert McNeil Jubilee Singers

PVCCA to offer concert

The Albert McNeil Jubilee Singers will present a concert in Spring Auditorium, Chaffey High School, at 8 p.m. Friday under the auspices of the Pomona Valley Community Concert Association.

The group recently returned from its fourth sold-out concert tour of Europe. It also appeared in Africa and the Middle East.

Founder-director McNeil and his company of 14 singers have garnered international acclaim and drawn attention to the vast body of music termed "Afro-American." The Jubilee Singers draws its repertoire from the tribal music of the earliest slaves, the spirituals of their years of enslavement, the patois and calypso of the Caribbean and the work songs, jazz, and gospel of more recent times. The singers have represented the United States at the major music festivals of Sagra, Italy; at Dubrovnik, Ohrid, and Lubljana Festivals of Yugoslavia; the International at Hainaut, Belgium; the Ein-Gev Festival of Israel, and the Mundial del Folklore Festival of Guadalajara where they won the first gold medal ever awarded by the festival.

McNeil presently heads the Department of Music Education at the UC Davis which trains music teachers for public schools and colleges. He teaches a course on Afro-American music and directs the university concert choir. Information about the Community Concert Association may be obtained from Mrs. Stuart J. Brockway, secretary, 926 W. Yale St., Ontario, 986-5789.

'Cuckoo's Nest' novelist plans to sue

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Novelist Ken Kesey says he'll sue the makers of the film version of his book, "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest."

Kesey, who now lives in the Lane County community of Pleasant Hill, said he plans to sue Fantasy Films for 2½ per cent of the film's net plus between $12,500 and $15,000 for some disputed rewrites which he says he did on the movie script.

Kesey didn't attend the Eugene opening of the film

Tuesday night, saying he is too broke to pay the $10 opening night charge for the benefit performance. He has also said he won't see the film because it isn't faithful to his book.

In Los Angeles, Norman Rudman, an attorney for Fantasy Films, said, "we just don't happen to think there is any merit to Mr. Kesey's lawsuit, and at the moment I would expect that any such lawsuit would be vigorously defended."

Prague group to sing

The Prague Madrigal Group will present concerts in Schoenberg Hall, UCLA, at 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Programmed are works of the 15th through 20 centuries, including anonymous pieces from Czech manuscripts of the 15th and 16th centuries. In addition, the group will perform three moralia credited to Jacob Gallus Carniolus, a Stabat Mater of Frantisek Ignac Tuma and Petr Eben's "Pragensia."

The group, also known as the Prague Madrigal Antiqua, is directed by Miroslav Venhoda. Its membership numbers nine singers and seven instrumentalists. The instruments include recorders, krummhorns, psaltery, flauto, traverses, fidula, tympanons, violas da gamba, lute and portative-organ. The instruments come from the National Museum of Prague.

Reserved seats may be obtained at the UCLA Central Ticket Office, 650 Westwood Plaza, and all Mutual and Liberty agencies.

Emmy Awards show plans entertainment

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences apparently is catching on to what makes for a popular television show.

The Academy says the televised portion of its Emmy Awards program this May will contain more entertainment and fewer awards. Ratings for the annual telecast have declined for the past five years, says board chairman John Cannon.

"This had led us to the decision that we must increase the amount of time devoted to pure entertainment on the Emmy telecast if we are to continue to reach the maximum viewing audience," he said.

Actually more awards than ever will be handed out by the Academy this year, but most will be bestowed off-camera.

Anti-American feeling spreading in Turkey

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A noisy anti-American minority has given way in Turkey to a quiet but deeply felt resentment of the United States. It is seldom expressed in a dramatic fashion.

"It is as if the majority of the Turks have given up on the Americans and consider it futile to protest against them," said one Turkish intellectual.

The resentment is rooted in the Cyprus issue, starting in 1964 when many Turks apparently felt betrayed by the United States because it did not take Turkey's side in its dispute with neighboring Greece over the Mediterranean island shared by Greeks and Turks. This coincided with the growth of a leftist movement here and a relaxation of tensions between Turkey and the Soviet Union.

At the same time, anti-Americanism in Greece, is beginning to worry both U.S. and Greek officials. The growing Greek dislike of Americans also is rooted in the Cyprus issue. It began after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus in the summer of 1974, with Greeks saying the United States should have blocked the invasion.

The anti-Americanism in Greece is mostly expressed in the press.

In Turkey, a lack of trust in Americans and a decreasing friendship is manifested in more subtle ways.

—President Fahri Koruturk and the chief of the Turkish general staff, Gen. Semih Sancer, were openly critical in recent speeches of the loyalty of the United States as an ally. The United States is linked with Turkey — and Greece — through the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

—American diplomatic receptions in Ankara rarely draw a high-level Turkish representative.

—American aid offers for victims of an earthquake in eastern Turkey last fall were politely rejected.

—Scores of Turkish veterans of the Korean war have returned American combat medals after Congress imposed an arms embargo a year ago because of the 1974 Turkish invasion of Cyprus.

—A prestigious restaurant in Ankara changed its name from "Washington" to "Kristal," which means crystal.

In the 1960s a large segment of the press, the influential teachers union, many professors, authors and artists were actively involved in an anti-American campaign, representing a tiny but powerful minority of opinion makers.

Even though a pro-Western and conservative government was in power, as it is now, it was believed in the 60s that with this much intellectual pressure and exposure the average Turk would at least begin to doubt the friendship of the United States.

But according to many Turks, it was the United States itself which accelerated the process by imposing an arms embargo against Turkey last February because of its invasion of Cyprus.

"An enemy of the United States could not have done nearly as well to ruin the relationship," a diplomat-turned-politician recently said.

The embargo ended a short period of genuine warmth in the relationship, born out of the United States' decision not to act to stop Turkey's invasion of Cyprus, following a Greek-led coup against Archbishop Makarios, Cyprus' president.

Anti-Americanism since then has changed both its form of expression and its scope.

Leftists, realizing that without any push from them, many Turks were becoming disenchanted with Americans, reduced their stinging attacks on the United States.

With a few exceptions militant students have begun concentrating their attacks on domestic rivals. In rallies they scream "murderous government" not "Yankee, go home."

The only anti-American act recorded recently was the bombing of a U.S. military barracks in downtown Ankara last month. No one was injured.

"The anti-Americanism of today is different. It is more realistic and healthy," a Turkish academic asserted. "A loud minority is not shouting slogans any more, it is just that most Turks are no longer naive and romantic in their views of Americans."

As the negotiations continue between the two countries towards the establishment of a new defense accord, with the fate of American bases here and the military aid to Turkey hanging in balance, more and more Turks are heard to say they no longer can trust the Americans and that it is just as well if they dismantled the bases, packed up and went home.

Turkey took control of American bases after Congress imposed the arms embargo.

This view is not shared by Turkish policy makers yet, but neither do they seem likely to compromise much from their demands for sounder American guarantees for the continuation of the bilateral defense cooperation.

The negative feelings, however, are not generally evident in the treatment of tourists and resident Americans.

"We can walk, work and live unmolested in this country," an American in Ankara said.

The discord, which is real and dangerous for the future of the relationship, is kept at low-key in every day life by both sides.

Report From Philip Morris

Filters Fall Short.

Researchers create 'Enriched Flavor' for taste of new low tar MERIT after disappointing results with special filters.

After countless efforts at designing special "low tar, good taste" filters, Philip Morris—like most others—had achieved only marginal results.

Filters are good for filtering, not for giving taste to a cigarette.

Tobacco gives taste to a cigarette. And the more tobacco taste that's filtered out in the form of tar, the less taste a cigarette will deliver.

That's the conclusion that led us to the business end of smoking. The tobacco end. A change in emphasis that eventually led to a remarkable new flavor discovery called 'Enriched Flavor'.

The new cigarette with 'Enriched Flavor' is MERIT.

It delivers only 9 mg. of tar—less than 98% of all cigarettes being sold today.

Yet 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivers the taste of cigarettes having more tar. Up to 60% more tar.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

Flavor Secret Hidden In Tobacco Smoke

By "cracking" cigarette smoke down into its various ingredients, we isolated and analyzed over 2000 separate units that make up cigarette taste.

What we discovered was startling: there are certain "key" ingredients in smoke that deliver taste way out of proportion to tar.

By selecting those high quality flavor yet low tar producing ingredients, 'Enriched Flavor' was developed, perfected and packed into the tobacco used to make MERIT.

Taste-Tested By People Like You

9 mg. tar MERIT was taste-tested against five current leading low tar brands ranging from 11 mg. to 15 mg. tar.

Thousands of filter smokers were involved, smokers like yourself, tested at home.*

The results were conclusive.

Even if the cigarette tested had 60% more tar than MERIT, a significant majority of all smokers tested reported new 'Enriched Flavor' MERIT delivered more taste.

Repeat: delivered more taste.

In similar tests against 11 mg. to 15 mg. menthol brands, 9 mg. tar MERIT MENTHOL performed strongly too, delivering as much—or more—taste than the higher tar brands tested.

You've been smoking "low tar, good taste" claims long enough. Now you've got the cigarette.

MERIT. Incredible smoking pleasure at one of the lowest tar levels in smoking today—only 9 mg. tar. From Philip Morris.
